VOICES AND ECHOES.

BY MAJOR HALL.

Voices and echoes, substance and shadow. These things have been continually before my mind for some time past and weighing on my heart. Again and again it has come to me that in the ever memorable words of the ancient seer, "I AM THE VOICE OF ONE CRYING IN THE WILDERNESS," there was contained an immortal and eternal truth.

There are, heaven knows, enough shams, enough echoes in the world! To come across a man with a message in his soul, burning, struggling to get it uttered, is a fact worth pausing over and reflecting solemnly upon. Newspapers for the most part seem to be pitiful echoes of something that was believed somewhere by some one some time long ago. One looks in vain right from the heart, carrying with it fire and conviction. The number of people there are that seem to have no conviction in standing; they echo what their neighbor thinks, or what they read, or what they hear, but as for themselves it never seems to enter into their heart at all to believe with a rough, rugged, honest conviction, that what they believe is indeed veritably true. It may be that this is the determining factor in the influence of a man upon his fellow creatures. It certainly was this fact—that it was a voice and not an echo when the General addressed the British nation two years ago on the Social question, that woke the nation as from a stupor, and in turn was echoed round the world. That was one of the most wonderful phenomena that we have seen for some time. It did begin again in the heart of man a faith that was well nigh lost, that when a message is got uttered once more a nation will awake.

For one Honest Utterance

To us who are workers, as soldiers, as Salvationists, the truth comes home with added point and power. We stand in the gap. We have a message to declare, and verily if it be declared

It will make Men's Ears to Tingle.

Oh, the sublime elevation that comes upon a man when for a moment he feels that he is indeed uttering the truth of the eternal and as it were stands between the eternities! It doth verily seem for the moment to such a man that he is indeed an ambassador from another realm, and in no way swayed by any of the passing thoughts that agitate mankind.

Voices and echoes, voices and echoes. "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness." Am I a voice? Are you a voice? These are the questions which continually press themselves upon my heart. Am I only a poor empty echo, with no force or conviction behind, doomed to die like the echo that passeth away.

It was because the Saviour, the Son of God, was indeed a voice, the divine word incarnate, and every syllable He spoke was pregnant as of an utterance of eternal truth, that His words, His declarations, swept like fire and are destined yet to over-run the world.

They Can Never Die.

Nations may rise and fall, and all the outward ceremonies of religion may be trampled under foot and be fondly thought to have been stamped out, but the truth, the words of truth will inevitably live on and resurrect, and in turn shake the thunder and terror over the oppressor and persecutor.

Everyone knows what is an echo, and everyone is familiar with the simple experiment of standing in some convenient spot and hearing the echo of one's own voice. The gorges and valleys of mountains are favorable for this, and herein is the explanation of the picture. The man in the foreground is the rugged incarnation of the voice, represented by way of illustration, something akin to John the Baptist of old, with his rough attire well suiting his rugged character.

The Pulpits of To-Day

seem to share the same fate, and each seems to vie with the other in endlessly repeating what after all are but the far away echoes of something that has had a being long before. If our pulpits, our platforms were what they profess to be—the place from which the living voice divine should pour out its burning message, there would not long be wanting a revolution in manners and morals.

Now, soldiers, is it because you have heard of the story of the cross that you go and repeat the same thing in nearly the same words without perhaps any inward conviction in your own heart? Do you emulate the press and take up the first echo that meets your ears because it is an echo of the hour? Verily you can become in your own sphere what the average pulpit is in his. The discussions you are familiar with all bear on salvation topics. That is your environment. But there is no more virtue in taking up the tale of others even if it be the progeny of salvation, if to your part in the first place you have no inward conviction of the truth in your heart. You are as verily guilty as others.

ARE YOU A VOICE?

OR

ARE YOU AN ECHO?

It is useless to be locking back everlastingly, and wasting your days in vain regrets.

RESCUING!

What is Being Done and How They do It.

TORONTO HOME.

In my last interview with Mrs. Booth, the short time spent was full of business, schemes suggested, plans purposed, and lines laid down for the quickest and best way of furthering the interests of the Rescue Work, which lays so heavily on our dear leader's heart.

The very last thing I did, Now, Ensign, you must regularly visit the police court, and do your very best to help and cheer and lift up those who have fallen before the tempter. Gladly I responded, and the next morning, with Major Mapp, I went to the Police Court. Army, whose mission and sole object was the salvation and reclamation of the lost, there is a tiny measure "could proclaim liberty to the captive, bind up the broken-hearted, and preach good tidings of full salvation to those that are bound," Ensign Hendricks and I started for the police court.

In a few minutes we were at our destination, and as I pushed back the heavy door and walked into the hall, I was somewhat surprised and rather pleased, "It's all so strange to me, for I have never been in a police court before, and I noticed the tears in her eyes as we followed the matron and stood before the "iron cage" where the unhappy prisoners are placed, the opening of the court.

Oh, my sister! the results of sin, how truly hard the way of the transgressor. One girl, a wreck of humanity, stood before me, a few years ago in her happy, careless girlhood had regularly attended Army meetings with her mother. She had yielded to the tender appeals from the platform, and sought God's pardon, love and strength, to become an holy, useful Salvationist, while the dear girl before us put off the claims of Divine love and lived for self, and sometime later married a drinking husband, acquired a love for drink, and in her habitual drunkenness, fell prey to

We had a few words with the prisoner, tried to help them, but they appeared hard and defiant, and we could only pray that our Saviour "who saves to the uttermost" would touch their hearts, melting their indifference and changing their carelessness to contrite cries of repentance and faith. Upstairs again (our presence attracted no surprise, for frequenters of the police court are quite used to it) I & Ensign Hendricks were called to see results of trial, and as all were "old offenders" the magistrate summarily dealt with them all with the usual sentence, so that in a few minutes they were again down the stairs again to await the arrival of the police van.

As we left the place our prayers followed them, while we looked up to God and asked for more energy and love to labor unceasingly for their salvation, "to seek and save the lost" (even those who have not yet our Saviour known, to turn them to our pardoning God and quench their bounds in Jesus' blood," for the bright triumphant strains of the chorus reminded us of the "boundless love," the "wonderful love of Jesus, and that "His blood can save from all sin."—Hallelujah!

Before finishing I want for His glory to give my testimony, that God is daily helping and richly blessing me, teaching me to trust Him for all things, keeping my soul clean, and enabling me to live "looking upward."

I feel emboldened to say that if any of my old friends felt disposed to send along any gift for the Rescue Work, it would be gratefully remembered and deeply appreciated by

Yours effectionately in Jesus,
ENSIGN FLORRIE FRITH.

SNOW FLAKES FROM BARRIE.

CAVALRY EXPLOITS — BLIZZARDS — WELL DONE, SOLDIERS—AN EVERYTHL TRIP.

BY THE D. O.

I have spent a week-end at ORILLIA, the first since our comrades lost their barracks. I am pleased to say, they have succeeded in getting a place to hold meetings in for the winter; the only trouble is, it is far out of town, and will not accommodate the crowds. We have a change here now, and Capt. Scarr and lieutenant (lassie) are leading on the forces.

The Saturday Night meeting was well attended, and quite a good time we spent.

One young man, who has just recently been converted sought deliverance in the Holiness meeting on Sunday, and another sought for pardon in the afternoon. He wept when he came, and trembled from head to foot. God soon saved him, and he took his place on the platform at night.

The barracks was crowded out at the night meeting. We had a good time and good order. the Spirit spoke, but no one would yield to His strivings. We closed after a good prayer meeting, and left them to think over what they had heard; this made six meetings for the day.

* * *

Capt. Hay, of Barrie, joined us on Monday for a trip through Muskoka. We drove to GRAVENHURST in the afternoon. The storm which had been raging in the morning came on again before we arrived, and for two hours we faced "snow flakes," backed up by a stronger breeze of wind than most folks would care for; however, we got through all O. K. We spent Monday night here, and, owing to the storm, the crowd was smaller than usual. We spent a good part of the day Tuesday writing, and then led a public meeting at night, with a soldiers meeting at the close.

* * *

BRACEBRIDGE was the next place on the list. We arrived in good time, and after a very nice march, we had a good meeting inside. Capt. Hay read the story of the man who came through the roof of the patient-form and went away carrying his bed. We fought hard, but saw no one saved, although there was deep conviction in the meeting. Capt. Lee has a good hold here, and things are moving in the right direction. The thermometer stood at thirty-seven degrees below zero when we were here.

* * *

We drove to HUNTSVILLE next day and called on Brother Jacob's, formerly Capt. J—, who has been compelled to withdraw owing to his illness. They were pleased to see us, and we were to see them. They still wear their uniforms, and are the good devoted comrades in the War. Bro. J — is the postmaster at P——, and holds a meeting in the Methodist church on Sunday night. He is very fair time. Most of the men have gone to the lumber camps, and the crowds were somewhat smaller than usual, but Capt. Rees is in for victory, and when her Lieutenant comes on with the golden sword, Well, comrades, a little more fire and a few more at knee-drill will do you good.

* * *

We put in all day Friday and Saturday forenoon at the town of BRACEBRIDGE, and arrived in time for dinner. A little business after dinner and a walk round the town, and it is nearly time for meeting, which was held in the Union Hall in the Sound as our own hall in the Harbor is both small and cold. We had good crowds on Saturday and all day Sunday in spite of the fact that Saturday was time in place. Some of the comrades came a considerable distance to be home for the day's meeting. We had a very good attendance at meetings, and although we did not see anyone saved, we felt that God was with us, and as a result, and the officers will be cheered by seeing many more at the mercy seat.

* * *

Seven o'clock is rather early to start driving, especially on a Monday morning after the Sunday meeting, but seven a.m. saw Capt. Hay and myself tucked up in the cutter and starting on our home journey. Fifty miles to travel, and to BRACEBRIDGE shortly after night. We took a short cut, and made it 40 miles, like a rest. That Soldiers' meeting on Tuesday night will be long remembered by the Capt. Hay and O. O. spoke on S.A. government methods, and also on personal spirituality, and did not forget to stop to speak about Self-Denial, something special is the matter of selling the CRY and pressing to the order. Look out, Ed! (Aye, aye, sir, Ed.)

* * *

I saw something here which pleased me much. Capt. Lee wanted 36 to pay a bill which was due, and with very little asking received the amount before he left the Soldiers' meeting. All donated. Oh, for more soldiers who feel like helping their officers in such a practical manner! I hope the soldiers in some other corps in the Division will read this.

Thirty-nine miles next day in the face of a terrible snow storm and a half way bridge as to ORILLIA for a public meeting. The storm kept the people, but we had a fairly good time.

Twenty-five miles next day brings us to Divisional Headquarters after being absent for about twelve days, and driving 265 miles! with the thermometer as low as forty degrees below zero, and snow and good roads. We have got of work now for a few days, and then will be off again.

IN THE PRESS.

The Plan of Campaign for 1893, or The First Decade of The Salvation Army in Canada.

"The Plan of Campaign for 1893, or The First Decade of The Salvation Army in Canada," is the title of a pamphlet which is now in the press, and which we hope in a few days will be ready to place in the hands of our friends.

It deals with the various new developments of our work in Canada, and among other things goes fully into the question of property, closing with the accounts for year ended September 30th, 1892. The whole thing is written up in a popular readable style, and even when dealing with the question of finances all technical expressions are avoided. We believe that anyone who peruses the pages of this little pamphlet will be considerably enlightened as to the inner constitution of the Army, and as to many knotty points which have come to the front from time to time.

There is only a limited issue, so that those who desire to possess a copy will need to make early application. The list of contents is as follows:—

Chapter 1. Ten years ago and now.
" 2. Retrospect of the year 1892.
" 3. Prospects for the year 1893, Rescue and Social.
" 4. Prospects for 1893, Spiritual.
" 5. French Work.
" 6. Change of Commissioners.
" 7. Finances.

Some of the principles involved in connection with a change of Commissioners is gone into and some interesting references are made to previous history. The relations and powers of a Commissioner with regard to Army property are also delineated.

Those who are desirous of gaining information with regard to the Circle Corps, the League of Mercy, Joe Beef, the Rescue Home, and other lines of work connected with the Army operations in Canada will here find many particulars which will undoubtedly interest them, and in addition, so we expect, be profitable reading too.

There are numerous illustrations, including pictures of the Commandant and Mrs. Booth, Commissioner Rees, and Commissioner Coombs, a scene in the early days, Joe Beef, new Rescue Home, the Children's Shelter, timber limits and others, and also a miniature reproduction of the first page of the Cry.

Application should be made to the Trade Secretary, Staff-Captain Friedrich, Albert St., Toronto, Ont. Price 10c.

Ah! if you put the ladder down deep in hell, with the top to heaven, it would take you all eternity to climb there, and then you would not reach the summit of the pit, for the pit is bottomless.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.

Easter "Cry."

We give early notice to prospective readers, buyers and contributors, and all interested therein, that it has been decided to have a Special Easter CRY.

Everyone, therefore, who is desirous of being represented in the Easter CRY—officer, soldier, or friend—should set about their contribution early. Many contributions arrived too late for the Christmas CRY.

The Easter CRY is to excel the Xmas CRY in every way, and our numerous contributors are going to help to make it so.

We shall have more to say about the matter next week.

Salvation Lexicon.

G is the third letter of the English alphabet. Like lots of people it has two sounds, one hard like the letter at the end of the pronunciation, like that of the two-sounding people, is depending on the pro—or sounding letters.

GARDEN.—A plant of slender form, which grows in the tropics, or in places and desert where hardly any other vegetation is seen, and alike! Its leaves are slimmer not which most would call beautiful it produced some of the most beautiful and fragrant flowers. It is a typical illustration of a true Christian. Singular and distinct from other men in ways, but always in harmony with their ideals, but even under most trying and difficult positions the goodness will attract, be drawn nutriment and unfolds there most beautiful blossoms for God's glory.

CADET.—A volunteer in training for military service as officer. The cadets in the S. A. have the advantage over cadets in the killing army because they are trained practically in actual warfare.

CARNAN.—Commissioner Elijah. The famous director of the Germans' Social Science.

CAIN.—The first born of man and the first murderer.

CAKE.—An article of food less digestive than bread and a little better than brick. One of the stepping stones to dyspepsia. Cake contains the same ingredients as bread, with a more or less abundant addition of spices and raisins, etc., which render it difficult for the stomach and fed out to be put use for the body's nourishment. Likewise the plain and wholesome bread of life is often rendered more palatable to the abnormal taste of those who have rolled out as a sweet morsel under their tongues by adding plenty spices in the shape of worldliness, sculsh, conceit, pride, etc., to make palatable, and makes the Gospel indigestive. Don't adulterate.

CAPTAIN of the S.A. in Canada for 1893. The best ever published, sold well, and were appreciated. A few yet on hand. Price, ten cents.

CALHOUN—Major Thomas, alias "Glory Tom." A Canadian staff-officer of renown. Well known in Newfoundland at present in charge of the Ottawa Division. His tunic has not yet worn out, nor a crack cost. He is an enemy to boot-blacking.

CALF.—The young of the herd, which was worshipped in Egypt. Aaron made a golden image at the demand of the Israelites when Moses was absent (see Aaron.) Jeroboam made two golden calves, which he set up at the extreme ends of his Kingdom, in Bethel and Dan, and established a form of worship of the same. In spite of the denunciations of the prophets, the idolatry was continued by many kings of the ten tribes of Israel, and constituted the great sin of the Israelites, which they never left until captivity, and finally punished by oblivion as a nation.

"CALLED.—Many are called, but few are chosen." If you are called, that means that you will not be chosen unless you fulfil the duty of your calling, and of your election.

CALVARY.—The Mount Sinai of the new dispensation. Here the pitched battle between love and sin was fought, and love conquered and won its greatest trophy.

CANVASS.—To make interest in favor of the War Cry. Should be done systematically, by laying out the city, town, or village into as many districts as the officers can find people to sell the War Cry, and should be regularly canvassed from house to house every week.

CAN.—That part of the dress calculated to keep the dust off the hair, and the cold and heat off the head. Is a very useful article in its style, and trimmed for every rank, from the Trade Department. Blue regulation cloth for privates, and fine cloth for officers, $2. White summer cuts, $1.50; for women, the same, from $2 to $5.

CAPERNAUM.—On the western shore of the Sea of Galilee, was situated on the rich plain of Gennesaret. Undoubtedly opposed against it and other cities has been singularly fulfilled, and it has proved a very difficult task to geographers to discover the site.

CAPTAIN.—A leader, the first. In the S. A. the officer in charge of a corps. Expected to be the leader of his corps in meetings, holiness, visiting, musical, War Cry sales, etc., and should always pay for his War Cry in full every week, and also pay his rent.

CABBS.—Highly called, the devil's prayer-book.

CABLE.—I. Hard with a view to do our work well; in this sense, should be taken by every Salvationist, with anxiety; uneasiness of mind. It is wrong to try to undertake the same without a clear call from above you, and ends in collapse. Remember the Lord Jesus, and the Holy Ghost, above and desires you to look after the souls of men.

CARGO—a course. A record of it is not only kept at the National Headquarters for Canada, but of every man at the universal Headquarters, and will be duly referred to at the appointed time.

CARNAL.—Fleshly, sensual. The fault of the Galatians, and is the fault of a great multitude of professors in our time. A strong barrier to spiritual growth. Can be removed by applying much prayer and engaging in WAR CRY selling, etc.

Professors and Prophets.

BY ADJT. COLLIER.

We find on studying the Bible and Bible characters, that whenever people loved God, He always blessed them, and they will them in all places where they went, and mistaken them under every trying circumstance. But, on the other hand, when they loved form following Him and disobeyed, He always left them to themselves, and they drive up getting from them, life becomes dreary and fighting hard, and they come and come again to the holiness table and when they should ask God to forgive them for their disobedience, and then make up their mind to obey Him in the future, and put their resolutions into practice.

When King Saul marched against the Amalekites, God commanded him to utterly destroy them, and that not one of them should be spared; also that all they had should be destroyed. But Saul, instead of doing as spared Agag the king, and the people spared some of the best of the sheep and cows, as they said, to sacrifice unto the Lord at Gilgal. But God told Samuel of the disobedience of Saul, and he told Saul, and pronounced the sentence of his disobedience, Saul was rejected from being king. How many Departments who love God and the hope of reigning with Him in His kingdom, and yet, like Saul, after they are converted, try to make some excuse for offering to win the favor of God. But a better plan is to act according to the warning given to the church at Ephesus, and "repent and do your first works, lest I come upon thee quickly and remove the candlestick out of its place except thou repent."

amongst the professed followers of Jesus to-day, and the cause of so much disease of soul, and will not only rob you of your joy and peace while fighting the battle of life, and leave you powerless to withstand temptation and trials, but will close heaven's doors against you for ever, because disobedience is sin, and no sin can enter heaven.

We also read how when the children of Israel were journeying through the wilderness towards the Promised Land, that as often as they departed from God, they fell, and could stand before them, and God fought for them; but when they disobeyed, their enemies overcame them. Just so with many to-day, while they obey God and walk in all the ways He has commanded them, it is well with them; they have victory in their souls, victory in their work, and God's will is pleasant to them. But the time comes when, by some act of disobedience, they drive the spirit from them, life becomes dreary and fighting hard, and they come and come again to the holiness table and CHAFF.—The starved, wasted life of an unregenerated soul unfit to beget goodness or love; the chaff of the wheat.

CHALLENGE.—A summons to combat. The thing we would like to see given by Hamilton L. Ashton, Secretary to War Cry sales. Who would win?

CHANGE.—A thing very much grumbled at, but nevertheless very necessary. Constant change is noticed in every form in order to prevent monotony, to keep up private stagnation, and often imbues inspiration.

CHARITY.—Love applied. The magnet which draws out the good qualities of a soul. The bayonet on the Gospel gun. The flag of truce which admits you into the fortified fears of the human soul alone. The break of life to a latent germs of good disposition. The hand of love.

CHARM.—That irresistible delight so keenly felt when listening to the solos of Staff-Capt. Ashton.

CHASTITY.—A strong wall against temptation. A rebuke to sin. The fragrance of a Christian life and the salt in the conversation.

CHEAP.—Does not always mean the lowest price. For instance; an overcoat bought from the Trade Department for $8, which will wears you for four years is cheaper than one bought from a pawn, and is a ready-made clothing store at $10, which lasts you only four months.

No Friend Like Jesus.

BY A. TILLEY, NFLD.

We have no friend like Jesus, the blessed Lamb of God,
Who bore our sins and curse and shame and shed His precious blood;
That we who once were far away from right and heaven
Might through His dying on the cross have all our sins forgiven.

We have no friend like Jesus, just view Him on the cross!
What wonderous love and pity He had for you and me!
See from His hands, His side, His feet, the blood that trickled down,
Think of the thorns, the cruel thorns, that pierced the Saviour's brow!

We have no friend like Jesus to lead us in the way,
To guide us through the changing scenes of life's uneven day;
Our earthly friends would fail to help and dark clouds intervene,
We feel His touch, we hear His voice, and on His strong arm lean.

We have no friend like Jesus, so pure and full of love,
Who sits upon the Great White Throne in His Father's home above;
This lovingest, constantly friend is always by our side,
And will not fail to help us while we in Him abide.

Then let us trust this loving Friend with childlike, simple faith,
Until once on earth is run and we reach the golden gate;
Then we shall hear his loving voice in accents clear and sweet—
"Come in, my child, and live with Me, thy joy will be complete."

Now just a word, my comrade dear, to help you on the way,
Be of good cheer, trust the Lord, He is our pope and stay;
Strive to redeem each fleeting hour and keep your armor bright;
Then you shall have the victory and conquer in the fight.

A NERVOUS CONTRIBUTOR SEES GHOSTS.

WINNIPEG, January 14th, 1893.

DEAR WAR CRY:

It is with all the courage I have that I drop you these few lines, my dear old friend. I love you more than ever, and can make up their mind to obey Him in the future, and put their resolutions into practice.

When King Saul marched against the Amalekites, God commanded him to utterly destroy them, and that not one of them should be spared; also that all they had should be destroyed. But Saul, instead of doing as spared Agag the king, and the people spared some of the best of the sheep and cows, as they said, to sacrifice unto the Lord at Gilgal. But God told Samuel of the disobedience of Saul, and he told Saul, and pronounced the sentence of his disobedience, Saul was rejected from being king. How many Departments who love God and the hope of reigning with Him in His kingdom, and yet, like Saul, after they are converted, try to make some excuse for offering to win the favor of God. But a better plan is to act according to the warning given to the church at Ephesus, and "repent and do your first works, lest I come upon thee quickly and remove the candlestick out of its place except thou repent."

of less serious character. My uncoldlerlike heart almost sinks within me when I read the above ghosts would hear thereof. At last, however, after some solemn meditation, I came to the conclusion that these ghosts are not so dangerous after all. This is my idea of their appearance: see sketch. And I wish the Editor and Sub God's richest blessing, and glorious success in making you a blessing to many souls, and, as to the W.P.S., I think it a very useful article.

Yours for War,

January 25th, 1893.

Cheer up, even though trade is dull at the present season. Do your best, believing that God blesses those that are solid, and knowing that success has been no difficulty to those who but such as is common to your fellow-sergeants in the War.

SKETCHES FROM THE CAREER

—OF A—

CANADIAN WARRIOR,

Capt. Emily Wadds.

(Now Mrs. Capt. Bradley.)

In a tiny red cottage covered all over with climbing roses, little Emily was born, in the midst of a pine plantation, with a peep through the bushes of the distant Lough of Belfast, in the North of Ireland.

From her babyhood upward, she developed a strong power of self-will, delighting, at any cost, to get her own way. This tendency was not a little fostered by the fact, she knew full well that where her wise mother failed, or refused her anything, she had only to cry pitifully and pet-pretty enough, and her indulgent father would plead for her until her wish was granted and her sobs hushed.

She was always a quick, bright child too, quick at her lessons, quick in perception, and well trained by her Christian parents in many ways, and naturally a constant favorite with her teachers, who kept her to the head of her class, and constantly to the other school-girls. So, in addition to the self-will, pride was easily developed, and where the spirit of vain glory should have been dealt sharply with and rebuked, her high opinion of her own ability was encouraged; laying up for her many and many a bitter soul-struggle in the years to come.

When she was fourteen years old, her father thought, for the sake of his growing family, he would take up a farm in Canada, where the prospects for his sons would be better than in the "Old Country." The entire change of companionship and surroundings was good for Emily, and she began to find her own level a little better.

Near her home, there lived a farmer and his wife, a sincere Christian, and here Emily spent a great deal of her time, for her mother could well spare her, seeing the family was large and the farmer had no children. The minister of the church at Minising was a man of God, who truly sought the souls' interests of his congregation. He dealt faithfully with the young people, and Emily began to have clearer perceptions of God, and the consequences of sin. She grew restless and unhappy, not knowing what ailed her; and yet with her proud, cold, reserved disposition, ashamed to let anyone know of the trouble in her soul.

One night, she walked to the meeting with the minister; conscious instinctively that he was

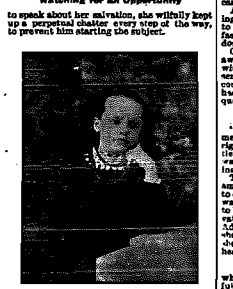
Watching for an Opportunity to speak about her salvation, she wilfully kept up a perpetual chatter every step of the way, to prevent him starting the subject.



Capt. Wadds' First Convert.

She went home knowing she had succeeded, and yet feeling that night a very guilty girl, under miserable condemnation, and so she continued for months, sinking deeper and deeper, and yet telling no one.

It was the holy living of the people she was staying with most deeply affected her, and yet, though dealt with personally, she resisted as a rule, until one day she broke down, and let them understand her condition of mind—all dark, black, plunged in darkness; as she was. For a long time, she had striven by effort to find out God alone; devouring holy books, and tracts in secret. But God was not in the tracts for her—no rest in them at all!

At last one night in the church, whilst they were singing

"I left it all with Jesus long ago," her stubborn spirit broke down, and to her dismay she burst into convulsive weeping before the congregation. Afterwards some of the members gathered round and

Talked with her till Midnight, but no light came till next morning in the minister's study, when after he had exhausted every argument, he put the thought second to strike her. "Now you've done everything that you can why not take God at His Word and believe that He saves you?"

She grasped at it and threw herself on the promise. Immediately peace came. She felt it was a definite transaction in her soul. She was home truly and simply trusting, but without any great or special joy for a long while after.

She had a class of little Sunday school girls whom she loved dearly and longed to see converted, and through them God taught her a great lesson.

She had always from childhood taken a great interest in her tasteful dress, not caring so much for showy clothing, but putting time on her constantly neat and graceful apparel, comparing it very favorably with the tawdry appearance of others. But now the Spirit of God impressed her that the woman that professes to follow Jesus should dress in all

Simplicity and Plainness.

No doubt this was a hard pill to swallow. But to her dismay in Sunday school, where she was striving to turn their hearts to God she observed her little girls were dwelling far more on her pretty locket and chain, and the nice way her hair was fixed, and the ornaments she wore, than on her words. That settled it. She determined to get a plain navy blue dress without trimmings at all. (This was before the appearance of the Army uniform.) Of course there was a little criticism among her fellow church members, but fortunately the old lady, whom she boarded in the post office agreed with her, and sighed often over the unfortunately worldly appearance of the church of God. So her fixed up hair was brushed straight and her golden locket disappeared.

Another lesson she learnt after hard training. It had always been a temptation to her to do common-place things in a surface fashion, hurrying through them anyhow to get done.

One day as she was washing dishes her mind away among the unseen, she was saying within herself, "Oh, if I could do some great service for the Lord!" when there seemed to come flashing before her mind the words she had seen somewhere of the quaint old English quotation—

"Do pe next Thynge."

"Well," she thought, "the next thing for me to do is to sweep and dust." So she set right to work from that moment to do the little household things as faithfully as though it was the Lord Jesus Himself she was ministering to.

There was quite a revival at this time amongst the church members, and in answer to earnest prayer-meetings, the Spirit of God was poured out, and many souls were brought to know more, when just at this time the Salvation Army, with Lapie, Madden and Jack Addy appeared in Barrie, not far from where she was. With hearts unprejudiced and open, she and her father went with some others to hear them.

In the Big, New Barracks, which was packed to overflowing with a crowd full of enthusiasm.

The unwonted noise, and the drum, made her feel a little giddy and sick, but she left profoundly impressed with the way the soldiers evidently loved one another. That impressed her most.

In the afternoon, the Christians in the building were invited to testify. She felt called to say a few words, but hesitated until her chance was gone, for such a thing as a woman speaking publicly was unheard of in her church, till then. She turned away feeling strongly condemned, convinced she had acted contrary to the leading of the Spirit. Wherever people might think, she resolved she would obey next time she had a chance. It came soon, and in the power of God helped her, and she spoke.

She returned home, determined to be definite in bringing souls to Jesus.

"Maybeth" was a little friend who shared her room, so she bent every effort first towards the child's salvation, promising the Lord she would deal with her in plain words if she was awake that night. As she bent over the pillow, the blue brown eyes opened wide and earnestly, filling with tears as soon as the Name of Jesus was spoken, for the little one was already

Hungering after God.

They prayed and talked, until she was truly at rest in the Lord, proving her conversion by her life to this day. This was Captain Wadds' first convert, and made her more anxious for out-and-out service.

Afterwards, she returned to her father's in Barrie, where she often attended the S. A., and Capt. Nellie Tosh (then a soldier) became her intimate companion of hers. She longed to be a soldier, and yet she waited and hesitated in every her own church for a long time, until at last she was confident it was God's way for her, and she was Enrolled Under the Army Flag.

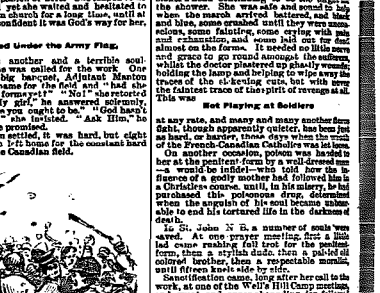
Now came another and a terrible soul-struggle. She was called for the work. One night, at a big barcost, Adjutant Manton wanted her name for the field and "had she not filled her former vow?" "No!" she retorted quickly. "My girl," he answered solemnly, "that's where you ought to be." "God have told me so!" she insisted. "Ask Him," he said; and she promised.

It was soon settled, it was hard, but right were ago she left home for the constant hard fighting of the Canadian field.



Cadet Wadds was sent straight away to Pickering, where seventeen souls were saved one night. From her long and full experience in the work, there are several incidents especially interesting.

In her battles in the French work, one never-to-be-forgotten scene is imprinted on her memory. One Sunday afternoon, being out of uniform, Mrs. Simon advised her to stay home from the march, but to come into the meeting afterward. Leaving the house with little Rathie, they heard the march approaching. They hurried to follow, but such a sight as baffles all description met them. A little band of about fifty of thousands strung, in the midst of a hailstorm of flying stones—yet singing as they marched—with Mrs. Simon at the head of her bruised and bleeding troops, calling "Come, Comrades!" her own hands clasped at the back of her head to stanch a gaping wound.

Surrounded with a Savage, Devilish Mob

Capt. McClary came flying in advance, and snatching the key from Capt. Wadds and pushing the door open, thrust the sisters one after another within, covering them as much as possible, from the shower of street jagged missels flying.

Again, she narrowly escaped a severe stoning on the march where

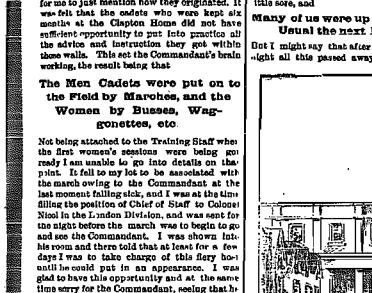
Commissioner Coombs was Almost Killed, when one of the unsaved lads snatched the



Capt. Bradley.

prominent red-banded hat, and placed his own straw one in its place, to prevent the Commissioner's head continuing to be the target for the shower. She was safe and sound to her home, the march arrived battered, and bruised and blue, some crushed until they were unconscious, some fainting, some crying with pain and exhaustion, and some laid on the floor almost on the forms. It needed no little some and grace to go round amongst the sufferers, whilst the doctor plastered up ghastly wounds, holding the lamp and helping to wash away the traces of the cri-kevling cuts, but with never the faintest trace of the spirit of revenge at all. This was at any rate, and many and many another fierce fight, though apparently quieter, has been just as hard, or harder, those days when the youth of the French-Canadian Catholics was let loose.

Not Playing at Soldiers

On another occasion, poison was handed to her at the penitent form by a well-dressed man—a would-be infidel—who told how the influence of a godly mother had followed him in a Christless course, until, in his misery, he had purchased this poisonous drug, determined when the anguish of his soul became unbearable to end his tortured life in the darkness of death.

In St. John N. B., a number of souls were saved. At a one prayer meeting, first a little lad came rushing full trot for the penitent form, then a stylish dude, then a pale-faced colored brother, then a respectable moralist, until fifteen knelt side by side.

Sanctification came, long after her call to the work, at one of the Well's Hill Camp meetings, and great and searchedding joy followed for a time, with 100 souls at her next station.

"My life is happy," she says, "yes, very happy! The cross is the attraction. I glory in the cross!" F.H

WAS IT A DREAM?

When one gets old, how circumstances of one's childhood come sweeping over one, like a ray of sunlight over a cloud shadowed sea. Everything looked so fair and beautiful in those far-off days, when our infant minds could see the earth only as it was to us—full of love and beauty—before the knowledge of sin had entered into our earthly paradise, because we were pure; therefore, to us, all else was pure.

One of those little circumstances, with all its holy influence, comes to me at this moment.

I was but a frail, delicate, sensitive child, not more than seven or eight years of age. It was a beautiful Old Country autumn evening. The room in which I sat faced the west, the window opened on to an old fashioned garden fruit trees and flowers growing all together. So well I remember the great fruit tree in the centre, laden as it was then with golden fruit, its boughs propped up to prevent their breaking with the weight of its rich burden. Even now, I seem to feel the soft air floating through the window, heavy with the perfume of gone white lilies and mignonette, roses, lavender and cloves.

I sat close in the window watching the sun sinking to rest behind the trees. The sky was one blaze of glorious color, gradually deepened into purple, then into all shades of crimson, gold, and orange. Suddenly, floating across this blaze of light and color appeared two pure white transparent clouds. They took the shape of human forms, but with angel wings. I can see them still, so beautifully silvery white, each one tinged with the color of the sky, as they floated slowly onward, and as I watched, burst of music sounded in the far distance, and strange to me, I did not know not what was sang or played—possibly had I been nearer at hand it would at best have been but harsh and discordant—as it was, it was completely suited to the influence of the moment, softened and subdued by distance. And at that moment to me heaven was opened and my child's soul bowed in pure, unalloyed worship.

Then, with tear-streaming eyes, I stretched out my little hands, pleading to the angel clouds above me crying, "Take me, oh take me with you." They floated on, faded out of sight from my sight, and yet they are with me still and will be ever.

I have gazed since then upon grand pictures painted by master hands, have listened to wonderful harmonies and melodies produced by skillful fingers, but over and above them all stand forth the great angel pictures of my childhood's days. I wonder sometimes if they are indeed spirit forms. Did they not indeed hear my passionate prayer? Are they and fadly, beauty taking me with them?

AN INSPIRING RECORD.

The First Life Guards' March.

BY COLONEL MOKIE.

Written Especially for the Canadian "Cry."

As these marches existed before the present system of training began it may be necessary for me to just mention how they originated. It was felt that the cadets who were kept six months at the Clapton Home did not have sufficient opportunity to put into practice all the advice and instruction they got within those walls. This set the Commandant's brain working, the result being that

The Men Cadets were put on to the Field by Marches, and the Women by Busses, Wagonettes, etc

Not being attached to the Training Staff when the first women's sessions were being got ready I am unable to go into details on that point. It fell to my lot to be associated with the march out, which the Commandant at the last moment falling sick, and I was at the time filling the position of Chief of Staff to Colonel Nicol in the London Division, and was sent for on night before the march was to begin to go and see the Commandant. I was shown into his room and there told that at least for a few days I was to take charge of this fiery host until he could put in an appearance. I was glad to have this opportunity and at the same time sorry for the Commandant, seeing that he had worked the whole thing up to this point and then unable to lead his troops.

How can I describe the hour previous to the time announced for our departure. The sun was shining brilliantly, the Guards were on parade in all the Glory of red Guernseys, white Helmets, Knapsacks, Water Bottles, etc.

The magnificent brass band which accompanied us played some charming music. Thousand also the first Sergeant Major, "The Victory," with its flag floating on the breeze. In addition there was the huge caravan as the Commissariat Department. The whole scene was sublime.

About fifteen minutes before leaving, the General put in an appearance. The Guards were formed into a circle round the Congress Hall steps, upon which the General stood, and there gave us his blessing. The Commandant was fixed up at his bedroom window, which looked right out upon the scene, and his feelings, I am sure, were past describing as he saw the last man pass through the gates, and the great crowd shouted and waved their handkerchiefs in an enthusiastic fashion.

Camberwell was our First Halting Place, which we reached after a two hours' march, having attired the whole neighborhood through which we passed. Our building here has seating capacity for 3000 people, and it is a very fair way to express it when I say it was literally gorged. We were kept upon having a straight go at the devil's ranks the first night. Expectation and faith ran mountains high, and brought into the building great rolling waves of light, liberty and power. Guilty souls broke down under their weight and fairly screamed for mercy from all parts of the house. That first meeting finished up with one of the grandest waves of enthusiasm that it has been my privilege to battle in during my Army experience.

The people out of the building, the next business was to retire for the night, and as this was our first time of sleeping on the hard boards our readers will readily imagine that there were some fine sights to be witnessed that night, and even after the lights went out groans could be heard from all parts of the building, as bones were beginning to feel a little sore, and

Many of us were up Earlier than Usual the next Morning.

But I might say that after about the second night all this passed away, and we slept as soundly on the floor of the barracks as we could have done in the most comfortable bed. In fact, personally I remember after the march was over and I got into my bed the first night, I couldn't sleep, but had to get out and do a turn on the floor, so accustomed had I become to that sort of thing.

Saw Someone in the act of throwing.

Now I cannot possibly give a description of every place visited, that would take up too much valuable space in this paper, therefore I must simply refer to one or two points of interest. The first that I will make reference to is the morning prayers held before we began the day's duties on the march. Every man was assembled in the barracks, and after singing and praying, a Bible lesson was selected suited to our condition and circumstances, also bearing upon the work God had given us to do. These meetings were led by myself and other members of the Staff, and so mightily did God visit us on those occasions that we have had tears and again we have had to stay His hand as we could hold no more. I have no hesitation in saying that many of the men got in these meetings what shaped their course and made many of them what they are to-day—successful soul-winners in our ranks.

We made another special feature of open-air work both at night time and during the day. We did not merely but a special spot was selected where we knew a crowd would congregate, and there each man was shown how to conduct a proper open-air meeting, and had the chance to step into the ring and pour his soul out upon the people and be told of his faults, and where he was weak after he had got through. One of these meetings has always stood fresh in my mass more since the day it happened. It was at a place called "Paddock Wood." We had no building in which to hold our meeting, but God was kindly lent to us, and about seven p.m. we began with a tremendous crowd round us. Song after song was sung, ringing testimonies were given, scathing exhortations were poured out, burning appeals were made; the crowd was asked to submit to God on the spot, the drum was put in the centre, and one after another came, until eleven were taking mercy. It was a sight long to be remembered; the quiet country, the shades of a summer night, the weeping penitents, the rejoicing white, all helped to make a scene that made earth and heaven resound with glad hallelujahs to God and the Lamb. I might describe a few more of such demonstrations, but that one will give our readers a good idea of a "Life Guards'" open-air service and its results.

Another feature about this march, which will not be forgotten by all those who took part in it, was

The Terrible Attacks that were Made upon us by the Devil's Dupes.

The first was during a midnight march from Bexley Heath to a town some five miles away where we were to sleep for the night, en route for Gravesend on the morrow. We had finished a glorious meeting at the first mentioned place. Guards always ready were mustered, and away we go with no appearance of a disturbance. We were followed by a happy crowd of fellows, who were enjoying the whole proceedings.

On our way to the town in which we were to sleep, we had to pass through three villages, and at each of these places we congregated band of roughs met us and belabored us with sticks, pelted us with stones, and being on the country road, we occasionally passed a group where some drink, and flung at us in bucketfull as we passed. We had literally to fight our way through. One man, about a mile from the halting spot, was struck with a stone on the back of the head. He immediately dropped, had to be picked up and carried shoulder high, practically insensible for the journey of a mile. At last we were rescued by the police from the hands of this crowd, and we had little further trouble were liberated from their grasp. I remember it was at this place I had to get the men to settle and to sleep that night. However, about two a. m. we were all fixed up, and before retiring myself, I walked all round the building outside, along with another staff officer, to see that all was safe. After doing this parade, I fixed myself up for the night, and it appeared as if I had scarcely closed my eyes, when I suddenly upon the work God had given me to do. These meetings were led by myself and other members of the Staff, and so mightily did God visit us on those occasions that we have had tears and again we have had to stay His hand as we could hold no more. I yelled for all I was worth. This frightened the fellow, I suppose. He dropped his brick and ran away quick, and as he was about five a. m. we rose and began to prepare for our march to Gravesend.

This was a terribly rough place when first opened by the Army, and I remember well myself as that they were going to give us a real 'leaking' that night. Of course this prepared us. We left the Fort Victory on the outskirts of the town, and went in. The entrance was quiet, this was the Guards' week-end visiting day, in the afternoon, many of them were ill treated, and others saved from being thrown into the river by the timely arrival of a policeman. As we did not parade at night the crowd got wild, and when we announced that we should march off at eight o'clock the next morning, I found out they had organized a gang to meet us, so privately we altered it, and left at five instead of eight, and began to go on a village green three miles away, while the crowd was waiting for us to march from our building. We rejoiced heartily at having slipped in this fashion.

Corps History.

A Great Fire—The Invading Force—Excitement—The Minister and the Drummer—Theatrical Combination—The Devil's Catspaw—Rowdyism—Rough Treatment—Hard Fighting—Sold the Devil in Solution—Knocked Silly.

Capt. Tiernay.

Beautiful for situation is Vancouver, and the pride of its citizens, the coming metropolis of the Pacific Coast. The site was once noted for its gigantic trees, but now for the rapidity of its growth into a magnificent city, with its teeming population and industries; and also as the Western terminus of that grand belt of steel that binds the east and west together, known as the C. P. R. It is also noted for its Stanley Park, which Dr. Wild says promises to make one of the best in the world.

The city is situated on Burrard's Inlet, which forms a land locked harbor of sufficient capacity to accommodate the whole of which we form not a very insignificant strip, bounded on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific Ocean.

On the 10th of June, 1886, Vancouver was swept away by fire, and an unknown number of her citizens were swallowed up in the general conflagration, which in a few hours left nothing to indicate the appearance of a young and prosperous city, only a few heaps of smouldering ruins and a couple of isolated shanties.

The city was only one and a half years old, when in December, 1887, some hand bills announced to the inhabitants that the Salvation Army was going to open fire on sin, drink and the devil on the 18th of that month. Expectation ran high, and many wondered what it could all mean, but that day, like all others, came at last, and the corner of Cordova and Carroll Streets presented quite an animated appearance by the crowds of people that had assembled there to see the Invading Force.

Many were not a little surprised, and some a good deal disgusted to see it, in the persons of two hallelujah lasses—Captain Hackett and Lieut. Tiernay (now Capt. Tiernay of the Rescue Home, Victoria, B.C.) coming marching up the middle of Carroll Street singing with their might—

"Fighting, fighting in the narrow way," and beating their timbrels like Miriam's band of old. Taking their stand they knelt down and asked God's blessing on their undertaking, and after speaking with telling effect they led the way to Harris' Dyer's House, then the largest hall in the city. That soul stirring hymn—

"Jesus suffered on the tree, Salvation to the Lamb," was given out, and was taken up with a will by a congregation of a dozen or seven hundred, and shook that old shell out, a building to its foundation, and was loud enough to have awakened the seven sleepers.

In the evening they chose the same place for their open-air meeting. The crowd of people that stood around them on every side was tremendous, and as Capt. Tiernay says, "We could not see a nook or corner of escape." The writer knows not of a more daring, noble thing done under the sun than these two heroic girls, strangers in a strange land, standing there alone with their God in the dark of night in the midst of that

Vast and Ungodly Multitude,

VANCOUVER CORPS.

to tell them of the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. The crowd gave good attention and drank in the truth spoken. When the meeting was announced they took their way down the middle of the street, followed by the multitude singing at the top of their voices,

"We'll roll the old chariot along."

The building was packed almost as full as a box of sardines, with a congregation often of twelve hundred people.

The meeting inside was indescribable; noisy and hard to manage, but there was a good many Christians present, who testified to the saving and keeping power of God, which seemed to be a great encouragement to the two lone lasses.

On Wednesday night of that week the Rev. E. Robson, one of the first Methodist missionaries to British Columbia, came up to the open-air ring, and putting his hand upon a young man's shoulder that was standing by told him that he had been praying to God to convert some strong young fellow to carry the drum for the two brave lasses.

On the next Sunday morning as the reverend gentleman was going to his church he was delighted to see that same young fellow apparently doing his level best to knock the heads out of it. The kindly preacher took off his hat and gave him an encouraging cheer.

Strapped Fast to the Drum,

That young man was Tom Walpole, the present WAR CRY sergeant. One of Tom's old chums seeing him, and thinking that he looked a little shaky about the legs, ran out of a saloon with a big glass of beer to strengthen his former chum's nerves, which to his great astonishment the poor fellow declined, something that Tom had never been known to do before.

The crowds were pretty rough. Lieut. Lynes (now Mrs. Capt. Creatney) was taking up the collection one night when a hard case by the Capt. Hayes.

Amongst the large number who got converted at this time I might mention John Watson, who now rejoices in the name of Happy Jack." John Hewton, Sergt. Gunficon, and Robert Given, now Lieut. Given, of Kingston, Ont.

One evening the Captain had appealed to the audience for a good collection. The next morning John Sheridan, a big six footer, walked into the officers' quarters with a sack of flour on his shoulder and set it on the floor. The Captain got him on his knees in the kitchen and he came away from there gloriously saved. The next day we saw of him he was marching at the head of the corps with the colors on his shoulder. He passed over the Jordan of death rejoicing in God about one year ago.

About this time Commissioner Coombs came to the Coast, and whilst holding an open-air meeting some one threw a couple of one of which struck the drummer, John Coille, in the ear, and the other struck the WAR CRY Sergeant in the neck, but they acted like brave soldiers and paid no attention, and took it as a compliment. It must have made the fellow that threw them feel pretty small, even in his own estimation.

A hallelujah wedding was to be held at the barracks, on which occasion Captain Hackett became Mrs. Capt. Harrison. Capt. and Mrs. Harrison carried on the War in their double capacity for a few months without any abatement. Their farewell ultimately came, up to which time forty-seven converts had been placed on the roll. Lieut. Tiernay was promoted and left in charge, and the old chariot rolled along as fast as ever.

The rowdy element grew worse. Red pepper was thrown on the stove, and the stove was kicked over twice on the same night, the meeting was closed seven different times, but every time someone who would come to the penitent-form for salvation, and in the midst of all that scene and general confusion, ten souls stepped out of darkness into the light of the children of God.

The Captain once took a burly brawer by the neck and shook him into subjection. The saloons were deserted, and and offered twenty dollars by the hands of one of his catspaws to anyone who would beat the drum, but without success. A miscreant, however, who occupied rooms over the Jubilee saloon, threw a bucket of water on the Captain whilst marching past that place. But to the honor of the saloon keeper, be it said, that although he would sell the devil in solution to his friends and customers in drink, yet he would not rent a room to anyone despicable enough to throw water on the messengers of God, and he had to leave the place instantly.

This period turned out such converts as Capt. O'Neil, of Emerson, Manitoba, Lieuts. J. W. Orr and Holter, and Capt. Harry Watkins, who is now battling for the Lord under a tropical sun amongst the Junglos of India.

On one occasion a loafer made an obscene remark to the Captain during the meeting, and a noted buffer—who prided himself in the name of Rob Himple—was sitting right in front of him, and sprang from his seat and struck the offender and where he lay very quiet for some time, and he then got up and marched straight to the penitent-form.

Then came orders for the Captain to farewell, and a banquet was arranged. The building was filled. There were no excuses as there was in the position of the king's supper, for 2230 was taken in at the door, and at the close the M.O. (Adjutant Scott) told the audience that if they wanted to shake hands with the Captain, they might do so at one dollar per shake. Some, one of the most hardened old sinners in the place, jumped up and said that he would Take Five Shakes, and throw down a Five Dollar Bill.

In a few minutes one hundred and fifty dollars was paid in the same way, making four hundred dollars for the farewell meeting.

Capt. Aikenhead and Lieut. Selby then took charge. The good work then went on as fast as ever, and Lieut. Kaye was sent to take up the same of Laura Aikenhead of British Columbia that time not distasteful to Selby.

Then came Capt. Harris (now Mrs. Captain Ashton, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, U.S.) and Lieutenant Gooding; in the meantime the corps had moved into a new barracks on Water Street. The Captain got her marching orders, and told the people about the open-air ring that she had got orders to go, but as the C.P.R. had not commenced carrying Salvation Army officers free yet, and as the Army had have the money, that she would have to appeal to them for some. At once fifteen or twenty dollars was thrown upon the drum-head.

Captain Ham and wife, and Lieut. Smith (now Capt. Robert Smith, one of the mountain outsiders) then took the reins, but they had a hard time of it, too.

Fought the Battle Nobly

and did a good work.

Bandmaster.

Captain Will then stepped in, a brave, noble-hearted little Scotch lassie, filled with the same fire and spirit as had animated the hearts of the old Covenanters, whose blood had dyed the mountains and glens of her native land. God's work in the corps marched steadily forward. She was assisted by another Scotch lassie of great vocal ability—Lieut. Frasier—with a voice as sweet as the warbling of the lark of her native valleys. After four or five months faithful work for the Master, and many souls saved, Capt. Will said good-bye; the Lieutenant was promoted and remained in charge, being reinforced by Lieutenants Reid and Dignon.

During the regime of Capt. Frasier, the officers' quarters were broken into twice and robbed at what little they possessed, and the very stoves became so unruly that it was found necessary to have one hard case brought before the police court for disturbing the meeting, and his fine was about thirty dollars and costs. Whilst on their knees praying in the open-air in front of the Gold House, on Water Street, in February, 1890, a mad dogs of the devil on his knees in the building threw on the Captain, but not in the least daunted, she continued the meeting on the street and in the barracks to the end in her wet clothes, and took a severe cold, from the effects of which we believe she has never fully recovered.

Then came Capt. Scott, another singer with a contralto voice of wonderful power and sweetness that helped to charm many a weary pilgrim into the fountain that makes clean. With Capt. Scott was Lieuts. Reid and Westcott, two faithful workers, and the Master's business went on and suffered no loss.

Captain Frith (now Major Frith, of the Rescue Home, Toronto), and Lieutenant Cowstock followed Captain Scott, and for about six months toiled with perseverance and faithfulness that is above all praise, bringing souls to God, getting them saved and clothed, none of her fire or vigor since that memorable night.

At no time has the corps made a better advance than under the present beloved leader, Capt. Hayes.

We cannot close this sketch without acknowledging the uniform kindness that has always been shown to the officers and soldiers of Vancouver by the Chief of Police and his officers without exception. May the Lord bless them, and follow Her Majesty's Forces for one of them got converted during Self-Denial Week.

The converts' roll shows an average of over fifty converts for each officer who has been in charge, which are scattered to the four quarters of the globe, bearing forth the glad tidings of salvation wherever they go. They extend lingly rejoice that the Salvation Army of Vancouver ever searched them out of the dark places of sin and degradation and brought them to the feet of Jesus who forgave their sins.

In the spring of 1888 instruments for a brass band were procured. What were they going to do for a teacher? The Lord supplied one for just at that time got converted and was installed as Bandmaster. The boys improved so fast under his able tuition that they were out on the march play-

Pointing the corps onward and upward, they changed leading the way, to a better and a higher Christian experience. Their marching orders came at last, but the work of God still goes on. The Salvation Army still lives in Vancouver, and and his imps it is still going on to help to conquer the world and bring it to the feet of Jesus, bravely led forward by Captain Hayes, ably assisted by Lieuts. Kaley and Johnston, who are ever on the alert in the Master's service.

The anniversary meetings, which were held on the seventeenth and eighteenth of December, and led by Brigadier and Mrs. Margetts, were times of power. The open-air meeting on Sunday evening, the 18th, was grand, and so appropriately led by Capt. Tiernay standing in all the majesty of a messenger of the King of kings, surrounded by sixty or seventy blood-washed warriors—on the very same spot where she stood alone with a companion to tell the vast multitude about the love of Jesus, and those who had the privilege of listening to her thrilling words will testify that she has lost nothing in three months. The Bandmaster left the city and his place was ably filled by another musical genius and the band continued to improve, but it was hard work on account of so many of the members moving to other places. The second Bandmaster moved to Victoria, and Robert Given (now Lieut. Given, of Kingston) took the reins and done good service in that position. After he farewelled for the Training Home, Bandsman Neisig stepped into the breach for leader. Although he is the last in, he is by no means the least. The band has made rapid progress under his efficient leadership, and when the come to VANCOUVER he expects to welcome them with some music that will remind them of the Hallelujah Tune of Heaven, so much it do.

On Saturday, Dec. 24th, 1892, we marched out of the old barracks into the new, where the Lord has already sealed the efforts that have been put forth and the signs of the times indicate greater victories in the future than in the past, glorious as it has been.

The corps is marching forward,
And we must be bold,
The prize that's set before us
Through Jesus we shall win.
In the strength of our Jehovah Lord,
The Ancient Theme of Ages,
Vancouver we mean for Jesus,
So sailed Brigadier Hayes.

Then set the corps on fire, Lord,
That all may see and know,
That speaks salvation from all sin
In Jesus' pulsing tones,
Burn up all selfish jealousy,
And make all pure, holy,
Then in Thy strength, oh, Lord of Hosts,
Vancouver we shall win.

Men I Have Met.

BY STAFF-CAPT. ACUM.

Carlyle, the sour and sarcastic, in speaking of the population of England, makes a remark to the effect that it is a certain number of millions, and they are "mostly fools." Of course we don't go quite so far as this, but even the first moment that we accepted as a truth the statement of the poet that the "fittest study of mankind is man," we have felt that the most we could say of many men in the end was that they are bipeds of the genus homo and species athropos. There are however, men that one meets who stand out prominently before us as we look back, as something about them makes it impossible for us to forget them.

How often the biography of a great man commences by stating that he was born of "poor but pious parents," in a certain year at a certain place; and there is such a similarity in certain respects about the records of many of these men, that one cannot help but feel that the writers of them thought that a certain number of lives written, taking care to leave blank spaces for filling in the name and place of birth, etc., as the occasion might require. We, however, in this instance shall give you none of these particulars. We simply say that the subject of this sketch was born at——in the year ——; that his mother's maiden name was ——; that his father was a ——; that he studied at ——College; was converted to God at ——, and became an officer in ——.

No! I will say none of these things. The only information, curious reader, you will get is that

This worthy wight from —— came,
An officer he is,
Tell, sir? Why, bless you, no!
Only some—for two or three,
His hair is dark, his grave a beard,
Is always on the rush,
And is a splendid sample of Salvation splash and push.

One reason I write of him is, because he is a man who prays. Some little time before I went to do business with him, and about the first words he gave utterance to were, "Let's have a word of prayer! Down on our knees we dropped. He prayed, and then I did the same. Prayer was offered up in a noteworthy one nevertheless. I believe in a man who prays, really prays, and that he can link him on to the Divine, and the result is the Divine and the human go hand in hand, and fight and conquer.

A second reason is, because he is a man who works, and I also believe in a man who works. He has no fixed hours of labor, but 168 hours in week, from seven till eight, he never has a spare moment. His time and talents are consecrated to the service of God and although he does not talk about what he does, yet one cannot help but admire him for work's sake."

A third feature of this man is that he thinks. What a number of people there are who really never think. Be it from a love of indolence or automatism, a man is (if we can call him a man) who does not think. The reason why some people can get through so much more work than others is because they do it over for a few moments before undertaking the work contemplated, think it out, and then set to work. A certain Scotch chief officer used to work as a very large factory when he was a boy, and one day he heard his master say to the people for brains, and not for hard work. This, in other words, meant that he divided his men into two classes, namely, thinkers and mechanics. May the Lord help us to be "thinkers."

The last feature I will mention is, that he reads. I would to God that our officers would read more than they do, even if they did restrict themselves to the "Bible, War Cry, and the books issued by Headquarters." "Reading makes a man a full man;" and I suppose we are correct in saying, that talking from a platform, night after night, is apt to make an empty vessel. To be continually giving out, without taking in, means running to waste in a very little time.

BRO. J. MCLEAN.

HERE YOU ARE ONCE AGAIN!

An Offer to Officers.

We shall be open to reserve space for any Officer to write on any Salvation topic on which his heart is stirred.

This is the Field Officers Column which we have referred to on a previous occasion.

If we might give a hint to intending contributors, they should select that subject which is uppermost in their mind at the time. If you are more than ordinarily concerned about the state and condition of sinners in your town, and find that this subject is absorbing more and more of your attention—that is the thing you should write about, and in doing so you will not only increase your own concern about sinners, but will likely stir up the fire in the breasts of others. It is a fact that is always true, that if you feel deeply about anything you may be pretty sure to reckon that others will feel deeply too.

If your heart is absorbed with the supreme object of inspiring your soldiers with a zeal for the cause of God that cannot be quenched,—all right; put it all down.

If you are concerned about the unsatisfactory condition of professors of religion, their unstable experience, their shortcomings, their unspirituality, side by side with the glorious provision of the Gospel of God for their fullest needs—glorious salvation from the force and the power and the slavery of sin, into the heavenly mind and image of Christ—give up your heart to the control of your hand, and let the whole thing be poured out like a living torrent of burning, fiery flame that will set others on a blaze.

If the WAR CRY claims your attention and you have got some plans on hand for successfully carrying on the WAR CRY war, with any suggestions that would be helpful to your comrades, or any experiences of your own on the same lines that have proved helpful to you in the past, we certainly shall be just as glad to hear from you, and put down all you have to say. Whatever it is that is pressing on your heart at the present time—and you will know what is—let us hear from you. We are nothing if not practical, and endless delays in writing to the WAR CRY and delivering one's soul, are as culpable and inexcusable as putting off personal dealing with the sinner at your side. They both come to the same result in the end.

TRY!

A Practical Disquisition.

A soldier of the Ottawa corps, Canada, once took his place as a student of a business college in that city. The president was giving a lecture on bookkeeping. A large number of students occupied seats directly in front. A volunteer was called for to draw out (on the blackboard) a cheque on a bank for a certain amount. There were present young men of talent, of intellect, of education and experience in this line; but just then a feeling of timidity took possession of them. The salvation soldier jumped to his feet and said,

I Will Try It.

The students smiled at the new comer as he made a mistake, but the president coming to the rescue fixed it up and said, "He has more pluck than any of you." That soldier never forgot from that day to this how to draw out a cheque on a bank. The circumstances were so peculiar and to some extent humiliating, that it was indelibly impressed upon his mind. How few people are willing to become fools for Christ's sake. You feel you cannot give up your sin and serve God. I would say to you, try it at all costs. You feel you cannot march—try it. You feel you cannot wear uniform—try it. You feel you cannot pray with your family—try it. You feel you cannot speak to that poor drunkard—try it. You feel you cannot pray in public—try it. You feel you cannot sing a song—try it. You feel you and in the saloons—try it. You feel it would be worse than useless to apply for the field—try it. You feel you can not get your salary—try it. You feel you can not compose a song—try it. You feel you can not play an instrument—try it. You feel you cannot write an article for the WAR CRY—try it. You feel you can not visit be whole town and community—try it. You feel you can not get everybody to work—try it. A smile of approval from your great and loving President will amply repay you.

Cannot Sell "War Cry" on the Streets

Failures Jesus Never Knew.

What He has promised He can do. While your heart is right and your motives are pure, directly or indirectly, you will be a success. I would like to say to every poor, weak, trembling soul, "Cheer up, keep your chin up." God loves and loves to help you and give you victory. Yours, enjoying the fight,

OPPORTUNITIES.

Opportunities of various kinds cross our path daily. Some take advantage of them, and many others let them slip.

The shrewd business man watches the fluctuations of the markets and when an opportunity for a profitable investment presents itself, how promptly he pounces upon it. He does not idle the time, for he knows that the least delay on his part would mean that someone else would step in before him and carry away the money that he would have made had he seized the opportunity in time.

With Eagle Eye,

The professional

Confidence Man

sees a favorable opportunity of fleecing some innocent and inexperienced traveller. He loses no time in making the acquaintance of his victim, and in a very short time succeeds in transferring the money of the unsuspecting copper to his own pocket. He made the best of his opportunity.

The Card-Player, the horse-racer, the billiard player, and in fact the workings of every class watch their opportunities and eagerly pounce upon them when the chance presents itself, and thus succeed in their respective aims.

If people are anxious to take advantage of the opportunities to benefit themselves temporally, How infinitely more so should people be anxious about spiritual things, and yet it seems as if they have time and opportunity for everything else but that. Sinners of various types attend meetings and listen to sermons week after week. Opportunity after opportunity for presents itself to them, but they let all go by unheeded. Demonstrating very clearly that the world is of more value to them than their soul's eternal welfare.

For their Soul's Salvation

God's children also have their opportunities of doing good to some souls, and benefiting humanity. Do they make the best of their opportunities? Alas, it has to be admitted they do not! Now Salvationists, it seems as if God has especially privileged us with Opportunities Innumerable.

Let us take a lesson from the past and the indifference of others, and let us go forward in God's name, anxiously looking for an opportunity of doing good, and when one presents itself, let us make the best of it. Souls are being lost all around us, and oh, what a solemn thought that many are daily waiting in the caverns of the damned, who might have been saved had YOU made the best of your

OPPORTUNITIES.

SATURDAY FEBRUARY 11 1893.

The vexed question of annexation still obscures a good deal of printer's ink. Partisans on both sides grow red in the face to prove that their peculiar twist is almost equivalent to the salvation of the race. As to that we have nothing to say, but it certainly does teach Salvationists a strong object lesson on another side. With us there can be no question as to the right, and as to the urgency of spiritual annexation. That is the very mission that our Master has given us to do, to annex every living soul under heaven, and by the passion and love of Christ and the strong and force of divine persistent energy compel submission. So we will run our flag up to the top of the mast and shout annexation forever. WHO'S FOR ANNEXATION THIS WAY!

ANNEXATION FOREVER!

Now, we mean what we say. The state of sinners demands it. Here, sitting at our very doors are sinners of every description in utter unconcern. They are utterly blind to their own fate. The whirlwind rushes past, but it contains no note of warning to them. Their friends and acquaintances fall within their very sight, but it calls forth no life-and-death struggle for their own salvation. They sit there as once petrified. They are both blind and deaf. Even the shock of armies which they had had a hearing of, would fill their souls with terror, goes on day by day without so much as causing a single moment of uneasiness.

IT IS URGENT!

Now, verily, this being so, there is room for Salvationists to be up and doing, and that with all the strength and force they can command. It must be annexation and no equivocation. These sinners must be rescued or they will die and be damned before our very eyes. That is what is happening at the present time. Consider this well. Let it sink down deep into your heart. There are no facts more momentous or more patent than this wholesale march of sinners to their own destruction by their own choice. The last strokes of folly and iniquity is added to their mad policy by their self-delusion that because participating in and at other times musicians, sculptors, artistions, and because forsooth they attend some place of worship, THEY as any rate are in a good condition.

A HAD POLICY.

Oh, for a bold, outspoken stand on this question. Do what we will, we cannot discharge ourselves of the responsibility. We have no choice in the matter. It will become a question with us also of saving or perishing. The whole human family is so linked together that all share in the common weal or woe. That, soldier, is your call and your commission. This is a war without quarter. Total surrender or death, and in this case it is death eternal. Up and at everyone of you, to the rescue. They that are slain shall live for ever, and the Lord shall raise them up. He that seeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life shall save it unto life eternal.

DESPERATE!

Quite a confession reached us a day or two ago from "Flora" acknowledging the sin of omission in not contributing to the Cry, but as he exhibits a genuine repentance, we expect to see a change for the better. Perhaps there are one or two others who might prove the veracity of the old adage, "Confession is good for the soul."

As announced last week part of the "First Life Guards' March" appears in this issue, which should not fail to be read by everyone. It will be concluded next week. The Vancouver Corps Mission, is quite thrilling and instructive. Next week a graphic history of St. Johns, N.F., Parry Sound the week following.

Capt. Cloak desires us to correct an error which appeared in our last issue stating that Hamilton had not ordered any almanacs. The Captain states that fifty were ordered and are nearly sold. The Trad-Secretary apologizes and accounts for it by the fact that the Captain secured the almanac from the store instead of ordering them in the usual manner, hence there was no record.

It is our duty this week to report a singularly sad incident. Officers all over the Dominion and many comrades and friends besides, are well acquainted with our old Auxiliary Mr. Robinson, of Big Bay Point. He came to the city on Friday last, apparently enjoying good health as usual, and was to have returned home on Tuesday. He was, however, taken ill and removed to the hospital on Saturday, which he was never to leave alive, as on Wednesday morning, somewhat unexpectedly, others came, and our friend and brother was ushered into the presence of the King Whom we have every reason to believe he was well prepared to meet.

"A citizen of Victoria" is evidently in need of some thing to entertain him. He writes us four pages about his having attended a meeting from which we gather he is under the impression that we believe God delights in plenty of noise. We also think it is affords us much pleasure in making fun of the devil. Quite an able disquisition, we feel quite enlightened.

Brigadier Jacobs is next to take us to task, and calls our attention to the fact that we omitted to mention special rates in connection with the Commandant's visit. As there appeared in a report from the Brigadier, we hardly thought it necessary to insert them again. We are gratified, however, with the charitable spirit exhibited in his letter, and assure him that we have a high regard for our Eastern comrades.

Specialities! We are on the look-out for matter concerning the Commandant's visit to Newfoundland, and hope to publish it in our next issue.

Still going up! We are glad to note that after allowing for the black letters this week, there is a genuine increase in the circulation of 100 copies. An increase such as every week would soon begin to tell. Who will be the next to create a sensation in this line, we wonder!

Two brave comrades belonging to the Montreal Barracks, Where on earth is Hughes and Lipsicott detachments respectively, have from us cannot tell, as there is nothing bravely step out and accept the challenge indicate its latitude or longitude. Kindly issued by "Mrs. Booth's Memoirs." Strange friend along the same.

Nanaimo, though not a very large place, puts to the blush the cities and larger towns of the Dominion. Scarcely a week passes without a report reaching us that two hundred or more CRYS are sold on the streets. A systematic canvassing may have something to do with it, and the lack of this may have a good deal to do with the paltry sales of some of the larger places, many of which we understand have no systematic method of pushing the CRY.

A number of comrades who are anxious to contribute to the CRY still, seem under the impression that verbosity lengthy preachments and testimonies which are too monotonous to insert. What we want is something with snap and bite in it. We can do with it

CURRENT EVENTS

A somewhat amusing incident occurred a few days ago on York Street, in which an old colored man played a prominent part. He was walking along with a bag in his hand, the suspicious appearance of which resulted in a policeman making certain enquiries. The old man stated to a reporter, "Ah'm a free-born citizen!" The policeman, however, soon caught tenacely the cashier was safely guarded by the not-work at present and above his desk. Some seven thousand dollars lay on the counter before him; while in the act of counting it a revolver was presented at his head and a demand for the money. The cashier courageously replied that he would not surrender it. An attempt was made at the side door of the apartment, but he held it against the intruder, who after a scuffle with one or two other clerks in the office who were not present at was the cashier, they became alarmed and fled, and as yet have not been discovered. This is the most daring and desperate case that has come under our notice for some time; it is to be hoped the gang will soon be discovered lest they have a more serious crime to expiate.

According to a recent despatch, the Earl of Aberdeen has accepted the position of Governor-General of Canada. Both the Earl and Lady Aberdeen have a very warm regard for the work of the Army, and in response to the General's appeal for the Darkest England Scheme some two years ago, gave the marvellous donation of $3,000 towards the same.

The postmaster at Owen Sound while walking down the street was seized with an apoplectic fit, and expired in less than ten minutes. The deceased gentleman was much respected. Death came very unexpectedly, in which manner it is as likely to come to the reader as to anyone else.

Quite a little sensation has been occasioned by the difficulty at Hawaii, by which the Queen has been forced to abdicate, which she alleges is due to the force of the United States' troops. It is inferred that the American Government is anxious to annex the Island. With Government as with individuals, the prevailing mania is to get more, which, alas! when accomplished often proves a curse.

A French statistician who has for some time been making a study of the average height of the human race, observes that during the last three centuries the average height has diminished some 51 inches, and further states that in the process of time the human race will become so diminished that it will entirely disappear from the face of the earth. This is dealing with things in a summary fashion and no mistake. We are inclined to think it will be a long time after the said Frenchman has left the scene of action before his prophecy is fulfilled. What will be do with them after, we wonder!

The United States has sustained another visitation from the king of terrors, who a few days ago claimed another of her prominent citizens in the person of ex-Secretary Blaine. It is said his one great ambition was to secure the office of President. We are sorry for him, we know and marvel at the seeming short-sightedness of men in seeking for office, which they are probably while neglecting those that lay before them, though we hope the deceased gentleman was not among this number.

The English Parliament reassembled this week. The Queen's speech was read, and the attitude of the Government was declared respecting several important measures that are to be dealt with during the session. The Queen's speech is looked forward to with special interest, not only because of her, by reason of their exalted position, are favored with the house of Lords, but by reason of their intensitive power to that glorious assembly infinitely superior to the pageantry of earth's regal demonstrations, among which some of the humblest and most obscure will take part and receive commendation and reward from Him who is King of kings, and Lord of lords.

The death of Bishop Brooks, of Boston, a few days ago, caused a pang of sorrow to those who were acquainted with him. He was a brilliant man in many re-pects, and endeavored to blend with it in various ways. He took a great interest in matters that were calculated to benefit the working man and the poor.

An earthquake has occurred on an island belonging to Greece, in which it is reported some 500 lives are lost. There is probably no phenomena or visitation that is more appalling or calculated to strike terror to a populous city. Yet we are constantly hearing of terrible visitations are ominous criterions of the last great visitation, which shall shake the foundations of the earth. Well may the seer of the apocalypse interrogate "Who shall be able to stand?"

What the Scribe Saith.

STIRRING EVENTS RECORDED BY THE SCRIBE—VISIONS—TWO BRAVE COMRADES CROSS THE RIVER.

And it came to pass that as I did read in the paper of the Army hailed WAR CRY and get my soul blessed, I heard one saying unto me in the tongue of the Editor—write yo with ink and paper the deeds done in the East in the division whereof Jacobs is Brigadier.

And he said unto me—say ye not as the scribe in the book of Samuel, "fall ye into the city and publish it not in the streets, but write yo to me that he that runneth on the way to destruction may read."

• • •

In the first month of the year it came to pass in the town of SAINT GEORGE that the precious Campbell and Brebner her Lieutenant, did plead mightily and was eloquent because of the woe and destruction pronounced against the sinners of their town by the Most High God. And while it was dark they both did go forth and did capture two souls out of the hand of their enemy, and there was much rejoicing in the camp of the Salvationists, especially over the one that aforetime had been a leader in the Lord of Hosts' Army, but had fallen into the hands of the Philistines. And there was therefore much rejoicing in the country round about when they heard of how the Lord had visited graciously, seeing that such so great a victory had been wrought for many days in St. George.

• • •

And not many days after in the same month it came to pass that Gardner, the Captain of the company at CAMPBELLTON, did move in and out amongst the people, and was moved with compassion as he looked and beheld how the people of the Lord had wandered lean in their souls, and did not seek unto their Lord with all their heart. And he sought unto his all men of craft, and examining, and skilled in the art of printing, and did issue instructions unto the children of Israel to gather themselves unto the house of the Lord. And when the appointed day was fully come, and many had come together to hear the word of the Lord, the prophet Gardner did strive mightily with them, and with many words did he declare the Word of the Lord unto them, and he chose him for his subject, "Our possibilities as children of God from the standpoint of the word."

In the first day of the week cometh Dick, being one of the Witnesses of the Most, crying in the streets of St. John III., saying, "Ho, every one that thirsteth in music come ye to the house of the Lord, for I have prepared me this day many instruments of music and singers without number. And it shall be that at what time ye shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, drum, organ, and all kinds of music, that ye shall fall down and worship the Lord our God and Saviour Jesus Christ, for there is none other name given among men whereby ye shall be saved, and at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow." And with many other such words did he seek to turn them from their idols to serve the true and living God. And many did gather themselves together at No. III., because of that they sought unto the house of the Lord, and do come and deliver their souls unto them, that all might have room.

The blessing of the Lord was upon the house of No. III., in that it did cause many to draw nigh and approach unto the penitent form, insomuch that there was no room on the platform to contain all those who sought to be soldiers.

And I heard a voice saying unto me, "Write blessed are the dead who die in the Salvation Army, both now and for evermore." And I looked and I beheld one clad in the garments of the L. W. Telegraph Co., and he did pass before me with a book in his hand wherein was written in the writing of Mr. Mason, of the town of WOODSTOCK, "Treasure Consult laid himself down and gave up the Ghost."

• • •

And it came to pass on the Sabbath day, that they sought unto the Brigadier to come unto their aid. And when much people had assembled themselves together to lament, the Brigadier did, with much weeping and supplication, seek to turn them from their evil ways, saying, "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die oh people of Woodstock."

And while he thus spake unto them, nine of the sheep of Saul did kneel beside the throne the Lord our God, and did make many prayers, and sought to be made like unto the children of light.

The Lord hearkened and heard, and did pardon. And a book of remembrance was written, called the prisoner's roll, and their names were written in the Lamb's Book of Life. And while yet many did grieve over the death of Jos. there was great rejoicing over nine sinners that repented.

And there appeared unto me the second time a messenger, likened unto the first, bearing in his hand a trumpet, crying, who is found worthy to open the seal? And one pressed before me in blue robes, and did take the seal and break the seal. And I heard means and lamentations, and the voice of sighing, saying, "Tush, the lieutenant is fallen, Tush, the mighty is fallen, and has passed in to the land of paradise, where the wicked cease troubling and the weary are at rest." And I beheld there was much sorrow in the house of the Army.

And again I looked, and behold that the son of a preest man called General Booth, did cause to be written unto Jacobs the Brigadier, saying, "Now my Boy Jacobs, I have fixed the sign of the cooing of the Commander in his Staff; wherefore prepare ye the way, and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is crooked be turned out of the way." And I heard a voice crying, "out in the wilds."

ATTENDING THE WEDDING

— OF —

Ensign and Mrs. Archibald.

The Chief Secretary Told One or Two Secrets about the Commandant and Mrs. Booth.

Weddings are ever destined to command a large share of public as well as private interest, and strange as it may seem, the interest never seems to wear out. Salvation Army weddings are no exception to the rule.

Ensign Archibald and Captain Butler were to be united in matrimony, and with an eye to business, the Chief Secretary thought to take advantage of the occasion to assist the Rescue and Social operations. The bridegroom-elect therefore was posted off to Hamilton a few days before, and returned with a jubilant expression on his countenance, and with a very practical result in his hand. All weddings and all events in the Army are made the most of for the good of the Work.

The day arrived. It was to be a high occasion, with a view to making the best impression possible upon the important city of Hamilton, and so giving our work there a push ahead. The Headquarters bandsmen united with the Temple corps bandsmen, and with others formed a party, which were conveyed by two sleighs to their destination. We was occupy no space in recounting their adventures. It was cold enough riding so many hours, especially in view of the return journey; but they did arrive safely, and were in good spirits, played round the town, and helped to put a good deal of zest into the meeting. On the return journey one of the horses fagged out, and one of the company who has a special affection for animals, thought he had a good cry.

The ceremony! Ah, what shall we say about it? To begin with, there was the wedding march—

A very Novel Kind of Affair.

The auto-room happened to be altogether separate from the auditorium, and a gymnasium intervened. So that when the wedding party was ready, behold, it turned out that we had to do a triumphant march along the balcony in full view of the athletes, and with the gymnasium in full play beneath. Was there ever such a strange combination? The march consisted of about eight, headed by Staff-Captain Sharp, leading Staff-Capt. and Mrs. Acum, Adjutant Taylor, Captain Howe and a WAR CRY representative, the bride and bridegroom of course, and with the Chief Secretary bringing up the rear.

The first thing that greeted our eyes on entering the meeting, was to see that the Association Hall was full up to the doors, and it looked a very efficient sight. The Salvation Army brass salute was given by the band as the party took their seats on the platform, and leaving the ordinary way of commencing a meeting, the Chief Secretary set aside a little time for knee-drill.

Then we had a good sing with a good song, one of the many Army favorites composed by the Commandant. Staff-Capt. McIntyre—who is a musician with his noble heart—spoke out the truth that was in him, and referred to the occasion of his four previous visits to Hamilton. His first visit was romantic; he was only a boy, and was really looking towards to get away from the police. Since then he had been converted, and at a half-alight of prayer in Hamilton had got a very special blessing—what was law for the one was law for the other, humorously adding that the Commandant not more smoke a cigar and be a General than any other officer could. The General family had been married under the same plaque.

An item the Colonel launched out on as a twinportant illustrations to show, was it ver little understand and appreciated, whih the General is often called upon to mast. He instanced the case of the Commandant, who has been in practically the bigest command the Army has at present on oth. And yet in the midst of his career the Commandant and Mrs. Booth volunteered sut thiheneral freely gave them both up for Ga ad. He spoke of the wealth of affection and thisbility of the Commandant.

The Personal Self-sacrifice

Averting to one other common fallacy, viz, th all sorts of injustices could be carried on, thColonel went on to say that the Army was totrnsh governed from the top for men to go ve much astray. He spoke also of the fre do which every officer has to pour out th so upon the people, a freedom practically ne fdered. Every officer could take a chair if he whed and at any time of the day have so op-air meetings all to himself.

Ann the articles of marriage was read, hats were joined, prayer asked for God's bless on the union.

ering the most trying part of the ceremony Stf-Cept. Acum whispered in the ear of t ocrade that when he (the Staff-Captain) was ried

He Spoke up so Loud

th even who was deaf and was down side of the hall could hear. This was at ed because one of the couple on the primed ossion could hardly find voice to speak.

been was a good deal of cutting down in the setting from beginning to and, and when the Ed Secretary referred to the Commandant d Mrs. Booth his words were received with plause. It was thought now to bring g meeting to a profitable close, and forwi ecials were made to those present to come to ciation. Urinnaiaiii was not slow to ac he, but what time we had we made the most

The meeting was scarcely over before it this were turned out and we all had to re tset even from the auto-room where the Chief tetary had been interviewing a reporter.

"Whiter than snow, yes whiter than snow:
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

• • •

It was Saturday afternoon. Outside, the sun was shining in all its glory, mother earth was clothed in a mantle of yellow sunlight, and all nature seemed pure and heavenly. We were saying a visit to the Salvation Army Prison Gate Home, when the sweet music of this dearly loved chorus was heard somewhere in the distance. We heard it once and twice, and involuntarily we crept up to one of the dormer dormitories to listen. Over and over again the words are sung,

"Whiter than snow; yes, whiter than snow.
Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

Curiosity at length overcame our bashfulness, and opening the door, we discovered the source of the song. Truly, it was a sight over which angels might rejoice, and devils have cause to tremble. Dinner was over, and before the men returned to work, a soldier, who had himself once known what it meant to tread the dark paths of sin, and find himself behind the prison bars, had gathered his fellow-prisoners in a little bright corner before they separated for the afternoon.

Speaking of the power of song, this comrade said, "One verse of a hymn did for me what all the Bibles and tracts failed to accomplish. "I believe," he added, "that there have been more people saved in the Kingdom than were ever preached into it." And what hymn could have more appropriate for such an occasion. As those precious words were sung, it the weary, sin-stained hearts that had so often resolved to do right, and yet had so sadly proved that without Christ they could do nothing, had in simple faith been handed over to the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Only now shall we know the sins of years would have been washed away, and what rejoicing there would have been, not only in heaven, but also in that little room in our Prison Gate Home.

But God's Word shall not return unto him void. That chorus may ring in the minds of those who, perhaps, thought nothing of its beautiful words, and shall yet be the means of leading them to Christ.

Dear Auxiliaries and friends, God has laid this work of prison visiting upon our hearts, and we want, if possible, to awaken your interest and enlist your sympathy.

Have you ever been in jail? (We would not for one instant infer that you might have been there as an unwilling guest) but have you ever gone, remembering the Saviour's words, "I was in prison, and ye visited me." If so, you know something of the sorrow, misery, and sin enclosed within those four stone walls. Oh our hearts have ached as we have looked into the faces of the prisoners, some of them fine, noble-looking men, and yet so bound by Satan's shackles, that it seemed almost impossible for them to break away. A weary month of confinement, and at last the great door swings open and they are free. But where are they to go? There are no home, their friends have long since turned from them in disconsolate disgust. But the devil of hell has not given them up, he still seeks his own; and disheartening by the failures of the past, the ex-prisoner gradually slides into the temptation of some old companions, and very soon he is as bad, nay, worse than ever. But how different might have been the result if some kind hand had been stretched out and an invitation to our Home given, where, amidst holy influences, the poor wanderer should have found a Saviour, Who could keep every fetter, and make him a new creature in Christ Jesus.

This, dear readers, is exactly the work we are trying to do. At our home on the corner of Sutton Ave. and Victoria Street carpenters are busy, and in every way we are doing our utmost to make our Home bright and attractive. We believe God is with us, and is busily settled, when we trust we shall have the pleasure of a visit from you, for we are confident that when you thoroughly understand our work your heart will go out in sympathy and love, and you will become one of our staunch friends and supporters.

During the past few weeks some of our League members have been practically solving the oft repeated question, "How can Auxiliaries help?" Only the other day we received almost welcome present from one of our Centre members, two large tubs of butter. It is needless to say how very acceptable such a present always is, and also how extremely grateful we were to her whose thoughtfulness prompted such a gift.

But the brother Auxiliaries have not been behind hand. You know we have a very large family, and at our Children's Shelter especially little toys and, clothes, etc., are constantly needing one. What was therefore our delight a little while ago at receiving a parcel of dry goods—another present from a Leagues member.

There are many others who could help. Remember, dear friends, it is for Christ's sake we ask you to do so.

• • •

And now just one more suggestion (and this is a very practical and unphilosophical one). guess it was. It was introduced by a banquet, which was fully attended and passed off most handsomely. The proceeds went in connection to our Home given, where, amidst holy influences, the poor wanderer should have found a Saviour, Who could keep every fetter, and make him a new creature in Christ Jesus.

CARTOON.

THEREBY HANGS A TALE.

Some one has sent us a number of samples of cartoons, which we propose to turn to good into mats for the House. From personal experience I can tell you that to repeat a good deal of patience, but perhaps there are some of our Young Auxiliaries who possess a large share of this particular virtue. If so I know you would succeed at this labor of love. Shall we look for your assistance? Will you come on dor? Will you call at the Auxiliary room and have a chat about it? If you will we will give you a most hearty welcome.

Yours in Him,

PRAIRIE PEALINGS.

While the merry changes of bells rang out the last days and moments of '98 and welcomed in the beginning of '99, the Knight hosts in the Western Division of the Kingdom were the ropes of Gospel bells, which too have rung out into a merry peal, ringing out old troubles, the banquet and ten cent supper tables being filled again to overflow. The meetings were full of enthusiasm, and marked with power and blessing, several souls experiencing that of all changes the most desirable, from darkness to light; and there from light to greater and nearer light—purity.

Various classes of people patronized the banquet, Mayor Bell in the chair. Ministers, and deacons, and church members of various denominations; store keepers and business folk; and then left us to do the work alone. In fact almost every class was represented. The music of the band, as also the songs and pleadings of the warrior chimes, were appreciated by the crowd, and will bring forth sweet fruit than what we actually saw. One other good change is effected in the Portage. Not only have they a squashing new furnace in the barracks, which is now thoroughly comfortable, but, through the united efforts of these gospel ringers, it is cleared of debt. Hallelujah!

• • •

New Year's changes. New Year's vows, and New Year's opportunities should certainly mark a glorious advance in personal spiritual, and outward soul-saving, soldier-making, uniform-wearing, WAR CRY advancing, Salvation Army work. We believe in advance for this. Nay, more, we are going to see it.

• • •

A WAR CRY deal did you say! Yes, we are in for it! Why not? The CRY certainly deserves it. Special contributions and articles, events and corps histories, and advance in sales and well-watch and see the remainder. Oh, we are going in for a WAR CRY deal, certainly!

• • •

There's one other kind of peal too has been rung. Capt. Isaacson is responsible for this one. The soldiers of Canmore are so delighted with the uniforms which they have received from headquarters, that they have definitely settled it, they will not wear any other.

• • •

Yet another peal—an original one. There was some little fun caused by the PRINCE ALBERT corps for travelling. Capt. Bennie promised the people a Xmas tree—everybody attending was to receive a gift. The hall was filled—excitement intense. The curtain drawn from front of the platform revealed a big tree laden with empty envelopes. The Captain gave the two or three hundred envelopes to the people. The people returned the envelopes to the Captain laden with $33. Excellent.

• • •

My last peal is from B.C. VANCOUVER corps have changed from the old to a new and more commodious and comfortable barracks. The opening services were large. Results, twenty-four souls volunteering for salvation, while Victoria is being graciously visited by an outpouring of God's Spirit. As the New Year dawned, thirteen (13) rushed to the mercy-seat. Volunteers—some of them with a sack which in his hand, while on the stairs at the door a fellow was seen to be real old-fashioned style. Seven more volunteered next night, and so the War goes on.

The two corps did exceptionally well for Self-Denial. Is it any wonder God blesses them? He always does the like.

AMONG THE

Sioux Indians.

I wrote from Moose Jaw last week. The few days spent there were days of blessing I renewed the acquaintance of three years ago. I also visited the Sioux Indians, and the reception was most cordial. Their faces beamed with pleasure, and I must say my heart fell quite tender. Oh, may God bless the poor Indians by prompting someone to give his life for them.

On the morning of the 12th I was hurrying away over the broad prairies to the west. At Calgary I met my comrades, Capt. Scott and Lieut. Cherry. They ministered to my wants at 2:30 a.m. At daybreak we had reached Banff, and although only twenty-four hours from Moose Jaw, where it was cold, snowy, and treeless one's ears and fingers, here it was raining. Then began a the like of which I never had or could form any conception. I could only repeat, "Isaiah's prophecy concerning the Lord fulfilled in thirty hours. Wonderful sights passed by in quick succession.

Passage Through Scenery,

I had the pleasure of meeting two Presbyterian ministers on the train, Rev. Munro and also Rev. Paton, who has been a missionary in China for thirty years. Our conversation was profitable. We reached Moose Mountain at eleven a.m. on the 14th inst. Was met by Bro. Kelly, ex-S.A. Auxiliary, who invited me to Sister Aldred's, formerly of Bowmanville, Ontario, and from thence to his own home in Estevan, where I spent a little time refreshing to find this a bush region with all the advantages accessible to a new settlement, and particularly its dread vantages, against which my noble comrades, Capt. Smith and Lieut. Jarvis, have to contend, and contended to day have a place in the hearts of the people far and wide. We have whose "glad hallelujahs" make the place ring with praise. Yesterday I spent two years on the prairies of Manitoba, the "wall of the forest" seemed to make me feel lonesome, but those soldiers have made a very happy difference.

Soldiers in those Woods

I saw at Alder Grove, which is our headquarters, my Lieutenant for the first time. He was singing with his congregation by way of introduction. We had a grand meeting. Then I witnessed the "inauguration" of the Junior Corps work. The prospects are very good. I then saw Lieutenant over the rough roads towards the U. S. boundary, while I went with Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith, our Auxiliary friends. Lieutenant returned next day and reported a big meeting; most of the crowd came from the States.

We had souls last night at Mount Lehman. Oh, it was great. I am quite taken up with the work up here in B. C. Lieutenant has secured a drill hall, and we have a big saddle and I am all O. K. We are now at Mission Junction on the C. P. R. Will write further in a few days.

WAR CRYS

OF THE WORLD.

This is the Christmas issue, and its general get up certainly demands a word of praise. "Silver Leaves" is the title. An appropriate border adorns the front page, made up of a number of leaves, on which are represented various scenes in Army work. The covers are red, the matter printed in black. A number of special articles, distinctly seasonable, appear, being illustrated by various cuts, which, seeing it is very difficult to secure the latter in South Africa, renders the production extremely praiseworthy. Several of the inside pages are also adorned with unique and pretty borders.

AFRICA. Dec. 24th, '98.

Among other contributions, we note one from Staff Captain Grayson, formerly of Canada, under the heading "Christmas Contrasts, from Manitoba to Canada to Kimberley's heat," in which the Staff-Captain recounts many experiences in her career as a Salvation Army officer. Canadian readers will recall the fact, that the Staff Captain was the first female D. O. in Canada, and had charge of the British Columbia Division, and is now in charge of the Kimberley Home. A number of other appropriate contributions also appear. We might also say that this is the first sixteen page Cry that has been issued in Africa.

This issue comes to hand with a somewhat dismal introduction in the ominous heading "Starving Children." We learn on personal authority that a strike has taken place by which some fifty thousand hands are thrown out of work and many families are reduced to starvation as a result, in fact it is almost heart-rending to read of the misery that exists; of fireless, foodless children, and of broken-hearted mothers. The Salvation Army as usual comes to the rescue, and has opened a large soup kitchen, where thousands have sought to appease the pangs of hunger. One paragraph will suffice to illustrate the terrible position of things.

"In another house Ensign Bell found a deplorable spectacle leaning over a grate to extract a little warmth from the dying remnants of the last few coals they had. A woman with two children huddled close to her chilled with cold, while her husband leaning against the door post was the very picture of despair. Food, there was none, and no chance of getting any, while on the table lay a scanty bundle covered with a piece of rag—the tiny corpse of a nine-months' old child, which practically had died from want of food."

Caught in his Own Snare!

The following paragraph under the heading of "Canada," speaks for itself:

"The campaign of the year commences with a visit by the Commandant and Mrs. Herbert to London, Ont. The scene of the event is the Christmas Cry. It is an artistic feat of the first order, and places, we think, all other Crys in the shade. It reflects special credit upon the designer, artist and printer. The cover is laid in a dark grey, on "The Sun and Morning Star," fired at the right top corner, throws its rays upon the Cross, which is characteristically dark and embedded among clouds. Above left an angelic choir, with golden harps, carol forth "The Captain of Salvation has risen and has visited us." Silver dust lends finish and effect to the idea. "Christmas in Heaven" is an attractive five-colored presentation plate. The literary part is fine throughout and varied, the principal items being an allegorical article by the Commandant: "Onward and Upward," by Mrs. Herbert Booth; and "The First Army Band."

The General's visit to Rochdale was characterized by exceptional success for prayer and visible results.

Under "Side Lights" each week appears an illustrated moral. We reproduce one for the benefit of our readers.

The holiness campaign continues to be the special feature of the Australian war and reports of it come in in succession. We reproduce one of the longest reports, however, as some of it relieved this week by several large cartoons representing different scenes in a meeting.

A new opening of course demands attention, and we learn that at the opening engagement the enemy offered some fierce resistance. The Captain's head suddenly came in contact with some pewter pots, and the Lieutenant suffered a big "Hallelujah" to escape him, which he had hardly attained before an egg, not the most modern, was scientifically applied in his ear. Still, considerable assistance was rendered and sympathy shown, and the prospects bright.

Commissioner Coombs has visited Ipswich and recorded some very enthusiastic meetings. the report of which, accompanied by several illustrations from which we take the following,Cut.

"Oh, wud some power the gifte gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us!"

And our Australian contemporary has assumed the honorable role. But we are in no mind for criticism. Some comment is being made, rather to stimulating than criticising. Still, thanks Australia. The best tribute yet is your own notice. Proof that the effort you quote has not failed of its mark. We wish you well, and so can we say all be interested up to greater activity, as the War Cry has increase in power, all's well. Did we not say of you that the Lord and Captain was in all that appertained to local news? It, too, is the premier Cry.

Quite an original cut adorns the front page of this issue, which is certainly very appropriate. The Statue of Liberty is represented as holding a Salvationist up to the gaze of the world. He is enthusiastically waving a handkerchief as an expression of the freedom of the country, another scene an Army procession is marching along the street, and Father Kitchener contrition on the blood-and-fire brigade. According to the article accompanying it he was not always so good-natured, but he mind became enlightened as to the effectiveness of the work of this detachment, his prejudice was supplanted to warm admiration.

Scene: A railway carriage. Occupants, two or three Salvationists and a number of others. Conversation leads to resolution of the swells to have Salvation ejected at next station.

Station: Swell gets out, finds the porter, and proceeds to state his grievance with a view to carrying out the resolution. Meanwhile train moves on, leaving swell behind, and the Salvationists king of the castle—or rather, carriage.

A. W. B.

A new departure very similar to the column, "Great Men on Great Matters" of the Canadian Cry appears in this issue under the heading, John Knox, Salvationist, or How to reproduce him." This column, we understand, will take up some prominent personality each week, and without doubt will be very interesting and instructive, and will prove a stimulus to all who read them.

How They Die.

FROM OSHAWA TO GLORY.

Comrade Lewis Short Chosen this Time.

[This account is very late, but some of the friends are anxious to have it insented. We do not accept unsolicited as for behind, but owing to extenuating circumstances we utilize in this instance. Officers would confer a favor by sending in particulars of promotions to glory, with a photo of the deceased, in good time.]

A comrade writes:—

His experience was a very joyful one, and no doubt he is now for a couple of nights in glory with shouts of praise to God and to Jesus.

He was born on the 17th of March, 1848, at Great Torrington, Devonshire England, and Emigrated to Canada in 1876.

and settled in East Whitby.

In his early life he was addicted to drink but in January, 1880, he resolved to give it up and be a man. He signed the pledge and kept it for over twelve months when a drum persuaded him to take a glass of cider, it

Overcame Him and he Fell.

He signed again and was true till his death. Just before his death brandy was used to bathe some part of his body. This was very distress and would not take his medicine, thinking there was brandy in it. He said,

"I'll not take it; I said I never would, and I never will."

He was blessedly saved in a Primitive Methodist meeting in the summer of 1879. In the afternoon meeting the leader asked him if he had a word to speak for Jesus. He said, "I wish I could speak for Him." That night he went to the meeting again and made an entire surrender of himself to Christ and ventured his all on the blood. He was gloriously saved; old things passed away, and all things became new. He was indeed a new creature, and could thank God for a real change.

Soon after he was chosen

Steward of the Lord's Supper

when his son came along.

"Dad," said he, "what are you doing down there?"

"Oh, my lad, I've got something I wish you had."

Praise God, he had found the Pearl of great est value and was anxious that others should find it too. He became a real in the church and Sunday school; he delighted in God's service and God's house, and he loved him.

Steady and Joyful Worker

About eleven years ago he moved into Oshawa. As there were no Primitives he united with the Bible Christians, and remained with them till the Army struck Oshawa. He became an out-and-out blood-and-fire soldier at once, and was the

First in Oshawa to put on the red Guernsey, and was a true soldier till death. Sick for fifteen months he suffered much without a murmur. The last time he was to meeting he told us how God had blessed him in his sickness, and filled his heart with glory. While asking God about it He told me to "go on, be natural, and do my best, and victory would come." Again I visited him, and found His promise did not fail. I feel like adding to this my present experience that every comrade may read it. The last six months of my experience, though and once almost overthrown, tempted to leave the God-given path, I could not see into it at the time, but it is made so clear to me now, it has been marvellously blessed of God since the opening. It is rumored that the Government intend to cease all grants for the maintenance of the Rescue and Prison Gate Home.

Some Times Darkness all Around,

"Kanaat Peirt" is the Maori for "Colonel Bailey," the Native Land Court Chief Secretary, now in charge of New Zealand.

The War Cry was used by a shipwrecked party on the coast of New Ireland as a "tiger of distress" a short time ago. With it, they succeeded in attracting the attention of a passing vessel, which bore down upon them and rescued them.

A deaf elder, seventy-six years of age, is colporteuring in Ireland as a "tiger of distress" a short time ago. With it, they succeeded in attracting the attention of a passing vessel, which bore down upon them and rescued them.

Staff-Capt. Bedford, Chief Secretary for South America, is practically the Editor of the Spanish War Cry.

The sales of territory upon which our forces are engaged in waging the war against sin and the devil in South America is equal to nearly twelve times that of Great Britain.

There are about sixty S. A. officers in the two republics of South America (Argentine and Uruguay). The many opposed. Are here about two and a half years ago.

Among our officers in South America, the English, Swedish, French, Italian and German languages are spoken.

Learning the language is the principal impediment for English officers in the Argentine Republic, but with godly stickability this is overcome.

The natives' opinion of our uniformed comrades was that they were revolutionists in disguise, for they could not understand soldiers fighting on their knees.

MY FIRST APPOINTMENT

— AND —

My Impressions at the Time.

No. I.

BY CAPT. T. COOMBS.

Nearly seven years ago I bade friends goodbye and started as Cadet to my first appointment—Aurora—in the Barrie Division, with an idea that if would soon be sent home, as I thought the Captain would never be able to make anything out of me; but I felt I must obey the call, and if I did my duty and was sent back I would be clear before God. I thought perhaps and expect more from me than I was able to do, and would find fault with what I did. Instead of that, however, I found he had a big loving heart, and was so kind, and tried in every way to help me and be a blessing to me. This encouraged me, and I felt there was hope.

The Captain Would be Hard

I was appointed the first Sunday afternoon to read the lesson. I read ten verses, while shaking and trembling till I could scarcely see the print. the mistakes were many—it knocked my sails flat. I loved God and souls, and felt there was nothing too hard for me to do if I could only get out of myself and

Not be Bound Down by My Feelings.

At last God so clearly showed me that He was willing to undertake for me if I would trust Him. The greatest blessing to me was the kindness and forbearance of Capt. Ham, my leader, who, I felt, was the one who had the hardest work would be to get men and women to the penitent-form, but I was much surprised to find the hardest was after they got that far to get them to obey God and walk in the light.

I also thought it would be impossible for a person who had been an officer in the S. A. and had backsliden, to find a place in souls, sinners day after day and night after night to go back into the same place, because I had the most confidence in were the first to go, and and say all manner of evil against the people they had just left.

One Quarter Day I was stationed with went. The first of his downfall was finding fault with Headquarters, and instead of going to God he turned to his companion and talked about things, until in his heart he became a backslider.

When I took charge of my first corps the devil almost bound me, the soldiers looked on me as a novice, through and through, until I felt all tied up. They said,

He'll Never do for Here, and one told me when the meeting was out if I did not go in and dance and do all kinds of tricks, I would never get the crowds, and would never get on. I almost believed it, and if I had had enough money would perhaps have gone home next morning, but this time money was wanting, and I had to stay. While asking God about it He told me to "go on, be natural, and do my best, and victory would come." Again I visited Him, and found His promise did not fail. I feel like adding to this my present experience that every comrade may read it. The last six months of my experience, though and once almost overthrown, tempted to leave the God-given path, I could not see into it at the time, but it is made so clear to me now, it has been marvellously blessed of God since the opening. # BITS!

A whole family in San Francisco, Cal., were brought to Christ through reading the War Cry.

An ex-saloon keeper says that when he got saloon he got a good dose of it, or he never could have kept in red.

"Patton's walking show room", got saved in an Army meeting, and is now a Salvation Army officer in the Indian battlefield.

This title was conferred upon a lassie who worked in a draper's shop, and who always wore the latest fashions by way of advertisement. Now she goes about advertising salvation among the dark souls of India.

A reversed gentleman attended one of our meetings in Ft——. At the close of the service he wanted to rent the hall from the Captain for a couple of nights in order to give a dramatic entertainment.

Needles to say his reverence was refused. And all his excuses for not using his own church because "it was consecrated," or "had an altar there," or because "they partook of the sacrament there," were of no avail. The Captain slyly met and answered all his arguments.

During a ten-mile ride of one of our comrades in Texas, he was greeted by no more hundred volleys from different Salvationists along the road. This bodes well the success of the work there.

A dear lassie who was a Catholic, got converted recently at McKeesport, Pa. Of course this received the bitterest opposition from her family, but notwithstanding all this, she is standing firm.

Sixty-five years had passed over the head of a dear old man in Michigan before he knelt at the penitent-form in one of our barracks, and was converted.

The London, Eng., Shelters have accommodation for about 4,000 men.

A noted devil-dancer got saved the other day in India. He threw away his devil-dancing suit, and both volunteered for the War Fight Army. They are now in training for the Lord and bring others into the light.

Commander Bellington Booth, of the United States, proposes to have a six months' campaign among the slums of Buenos Ayres.

A bag of oatmeal was secured at a drunkard collection in an Australian corps.

A drunkard went into the office of a paper, and who would do all he could to rent the Army out of town, got saved recently in Guthrie, U. S. He got on the table at the meetings, God's Spirit took hold of him, and he was converted.

"Why, you can fairly see it in his face," said one of a group of young fellows in a street corner, as one of our workers passed by, with head erect and looking straight into the faces of world-ly-minded sinners.

There are one hundred and fifty S. A. officers and fifty corps in Denmark. In Norway, the S. A. have property to the value of about $85,000.

The Social operations are rapidly developing in the Australian Colonies. The different industries are progressing favorably. At the Brickyard alone, some 20,000 bricks are made daily.

"No smoking allowed here—it will hurt the dogs," was the sign at a recent dog show in Los Angeles, California. Now, how can we justify yourselves, when even canines are injured by the obnoxious weed?

The struggle between capital and labor in England has thrown about 50,000 hands out of work.

The S. A. ever on the alert to help the needy, has stepped in, and are relieving hundreds of the distressed. Some thousands of them have been fed, and in different little ways their wants relieved.

Our Rescue operations in New Zealand have been marvellously blessed of God since the opening. It is rumored that the Government intend to cease all grants for the maintenance of the Rescue and Prison Gate Home.

EDITOR'S NOTES.

The unfortunate Editor has got himself into the wrong box this time. It was all brought about by the Special Correspondent Coupon. We hardly know how to inform our readers so as to make them feel that we are really serious in what we say, but there is the fact that the Special Correspondent Coupon has brought down on the head of the Editor the serious charge of being too autocratic.

This is not all, alas! but he is informed on good authority as follows:—"There has not anything taken place in my recollections that is causing the same amount of unrest in the ranks as your coupon has done, except probably ——— hook. It is too autocratic."

Now, we really did think in the innocency of our heart that the Special Correspondent Coupon was framed on the best of democratic principles. We thought it gave a good opportunity for any Salvationist of any rank, or any friend, to become linked on to the WAR CRY staff. The Editor meekly apologizes, though in every case the D. O.'s recommendation would be first obtained before the names of the Special Correspondents were announced in the Cry.

Following close upon this is a suggestion from a brother who, in his own article, "Hope for the Backslider," he says—and says with reason—why should not the poor backslider have a chance with the War Cry? We know no reason to the contrary, and if any brother or sister who has fallen away thinks it would help him or her to send a communication to the Cry as to their own experience, we are quite open to consider the question of its merits for insertion in the Cry.

We have received letters from several Divisional Officers, all of them concerning their personal interest in the Cry, and their determination to take up the question of increasing the circulation. One or two have averred—shall we say it?—that in some cases the Field Officer is not quite as much alive on the question as he ought to be, and in fact, have given one or two significant hints. We won't say anything now, as we are hoping to hear shortly of better things.

We are happy to present our readers with an original song set to original music by Mrs. Herbert Booth, and a right good rattling song it is, judging by the stray sounds which came into our ears the other day. Mrs. Booth has been working manfully during the Commandant's absence, getting in supplies and generally directing affairs. In the getting of supplies she is distinctly ahead of any one of us, and quite an at stance. In the spice of all sorts of difficulties she has gone right on carrying fire into the enemy's quarter.

Next week we expect to be in a position to give an extended report of the Commandant's meetings in Newfoundland. During the winter months there is only a small one in a fortnight either to or from Newfoundland, so that we guess we shall have a good turn out.

We wonder whether officers are aware that sometime ago we made an offer to reserve a column for any officer who wanted to pour out some message that was burning in his heart. We make the offer again. It is not confined to any particular subject. We did intend for some weeks to have a series of holiness addresses, but it is quite open to any officer to write on any subject that his heart is full of. In fact, if our comrades would not mind the Editor giving a hint, that is the subject which they will be competent to write about when their heart is full of it and they are stirred within themselves. Here is the secret of getting your message felt, because you first feel it yourself.

This will be quite independent of the series referred to last week, "My first Appointment and my impressions at the Time." We shall be glad to have these contributions in as soon as possible.

STAFF-CAPT. BRATTY, D. O.

A Meeting in the House.

LITTLE YORK.—The park was packed from one of good cheer. We have started cottage meetings. Last Friday night, we had a splendid time, when several got helped and blessed. Interest in our work is increasing, and God is having his way.—Capt. BEHNILEY.

A Touching Farewell.

OSHAWA.—Our dearly loved officers, Capt. Patterson and Lieut. Murray, have said goodbye. We had a farewell meeting at the barracks, and then we marched to the quarters, where we found a surprise party. A beautiful repast had been prepared by some kind friends, to which about forty of us sat down, after which, some loving words of counsel were given by the officers.—M. WHEELER.

A Night at the Temple.

"I have to go home" said a sister to me on the steps of the Temple last Thursday night. "I just came out to do some shopping, and seeing the march, I could not help joining in with them. We had a beautiful march and open-air, I enjoyed it so much, but I can not stay to the meeting." Inside, I found the officers, soldiers, and band taking their seats on the platform. The meeting was lively. I saw one of Headquarters' Staff doing a little dance to the music of the band; he was not on the platform, but in the gallery, where he had stolen for a few seconds to get a share of the blessing that fell on us. I am sure he went back to his night work behind the scenes encouraged, and evidently with the glory in his feet. Sergeant-Major Davis buried red-hot truths from the Bible at the audience, evidently wounding some. One soul came to Jesus. A poor lad, sunk deep in sin. His brother, a weak convert, came and knelt down beside him to pray, that he might be saved.

The war is raging fiercely,
God calls for soldiers now,
Who enlisth since forsaking,
Will rust the last to wear.

—Capt. WM. RITCHIE.

A Great Commission

LIPPINCOTT STREET.—We had a grand farewell meeting on Wednesday 11th, when all the cadets, both males and females, received their commissions. A hearty welcome was also given to the new D. O. Staff Capt. Beatty. Colonel McKenzie led in his usual happy manner, and for a blessing was held for every lad and lassie as their commission was handed to them. It was a splendid meeting, and one young man forewelled from the devil, and was welcomed by God and his people. Sunday, 15th, was a day to be remembered by us all. The Spirit of God was with us from daylight till dark. In the afternoon, Captain Sullivan farewelled, and pleaded for souls; and one young man consecrated and found peace. At night, we prayed in the upper chamber for extra power, and got it too; for when the prayer meeting commenced, a young woman stepped out, and then another soon followed her, and both got wonderfully saved. Our soldiers are a brave lot, and in good spiritual condition.—Lieut. C. BEARCHELL.

Barrie Division.

ADJT. COLLIER, D. O

An Awful Row.

STROUD.—Last Saturday night, about dark, a poor fellow, who had been drinking, came to the quarters and wanted to come in and warm himself. I recognized him at once as the lad who had the Sunday before made an awful row in the meeting; but, however, I let him in, gave him something to eat, and kept him all night. In the morning, when he was sober, he came to me and said, "I feel wonderfully saved, for in the meetings all day, thinks I, my God has saved him.—Lieut. JAMES BECKETT.

Moncton District.

ADJT. HOWELL, D. O.

CAMPBELLTON.—Good meetings. Two seeking deliverance. Victory.—Capt. D. P. MCIAIR.

Gone up Higher.

NEEPAWA.—A final farewell meeting with our old comrades on Wednesday night, and next morning we boxed the train for our new sphere of labor. After a hearty welcome from the Neepawa comrades we spent a good Sunday together. At night Capt. Bailey led a memorial service for Sister McDonald, who has been promoted to glory. We feel confident that a grand work shall be done here. Capt. Edmonds is helping in the fight.—Captain PATTON.

An Obstinate Animal.

EMERSON.—Last Sunday was my first to this corps. The Captain and I started for an outpost twenty miles away. While on our journey a blizzard sprang up, and to add to our difficulties our poney became frightened and started to kick, but in spite of every obstacle we pressed on and reached our destination in safety.—Lieut. OAR.

Change, not Decay.

MOOSEJAW.—Capt. McGill, one of our old officers has been supplying for a few days. We had some blessed times, and every one was glad to see their old officer. Capt. Flaws has now taken charge, and we all marched forward determined to know no defeat. — Sec. T. GREEN.

An Original Tree.

PRINCE ALBERT.—A novel Xmas tree was seen in our barracks on Dec. 25th. Instead of being heavily laden with costly gifts it was hung with envelopes which were taken of and distributed among the audience. They were afterwards returned to us with a donation for the work. Over $30 was thus realized. Above watch-night service two precious souls cried for mercy.—Lieut. A. THOMAS.

GALT.

A few of the most striking events in connection with the Galt corps last week are as follows:

I.—One soul at the mercy-seat seeking forgiveness in Sunday morning's meeting.

II.—

Five Seeking the Salvation

of God in Sunday night's meeting.

III.—Another one in the same meeting, who has for a long time been disobeying the voice of God, came and sang as a solo to God, "Here I give myself to Thee, friends and time," etc.

IV.—A Salvation Army wind up and a time of rejoicing.

One of the crowd for Christ,
Capt. FRASER.

Souls and Money.

LONDON.—The devil and his troops fought hard yesterday but the soldiers of the Lord came well to the front, and after some good knee-drill and some steady steady shooting from the heavy guns, three souls fell at the Cross and got saved. Many just daily wounded. Our corps for some people who help us with their money as well as their prayers. We were in need of $17 the other week to pay a bill that was due. After putting our needs before the people we received $21 in donations. Also a month or so ago we asked our friends for donations for coal and received over $20. This week $7 was sent all the way from Toronto to pay in the coal collection. A lady who lives in a small village near the city brought in a large turkey the other day and said she was glad to hear of the Circle Corps system, and promised to look after the officers and horse when they come that way.—GIDEON MILLER, Capt.

Manitoba District.

BRIGADIER MARGETTS, D.O.

New Fields of Labor.

SELKIRK.—After over a year's fighting in Carberry, where we had the joy of seeing many souls find salvation, I arrived at this corps and found a band of blood-and-fire soldiers, who are full of faith and zeal. We mean to see souls saved.—Capt. ISAACSON.

Hard Knocks—Soft Heart.

CALGARY.—After several days of anxious waiting our long looked for Brigadier have arrived, and we believe that under their leadership God is going to work wonders. On Sunday night a poor lad came forward to God. — Sec. Dixon in his testimony, said, "That while his knees are trembling under his heart is getting softer."—S. L. BARKER.

The Mayor to the Front.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE.—Our banquet on Jan. 2nd was a great success in every sense of the word. Kind friends abundantly supplied our material wants. The Mayor (Mr. Newman), and many other prominent citizens were present. The meeting afterwards was led by Brigadier and Mrs. Margetts, assisted by Capts. Arkett, Milner, Bailey and Flaws, also the Salvation brass band. Everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves, and $140 was raised, which greatly lightens our financial burden.—Capt. COWAN.

Brigadier Margetts.

MORDEN.—We have had Brigadier and Mrs. Margetts with us for a week, when God came down and blessed us richly. Although we have only been here for a little while we have learned to love the people and long to bring them to Jesus.—Capt. WESLAKOTT.

Newfoundland District.

STAFF-CAPT. READ, D. O.

Snatched from the Devil.

JACKSON COVE.—Last night in our meeting the power of God was very strongly felt. Two backsliders and one prisoner brought back from the devil's ranks; many more felt they were backsliders. We are believing for great things, and we know that God will not disappoint us.—Jos. I. MANUEL.

A Man in a Rage.

HARRY'S HARBOR.—Four souls in the fountain—two sinners and two backsliders. The devil is raging here. I went into man's house and he asked me was I a priest. I showed him the hand on my back, and I began to talk to him about his soul. He said he had the love of God in his heart. I told him he had the love of the devil in his heart. He got in a rage and rose in his feet as though he was going to strike me, and said he would put me outside of the door. I talked and prayed with him, and on leaving I asked him could I visit him again and he said yes. We are going in for greater victories, and we mean to fight the devil on every hand.—Lieut. R. J. BENNETT.

His Satanic Majesty.

TWILLINGGATE.—You will see by this that we are having a high old time here. The devil is mad. Five souls have been saved. We have pretty lively times here with the roughs, but we are gaining the victory.—Capt. BOWERS.

A Beautiful Snare Drum.

HARBOR GRACE.—Christmas is past, but the good news will never be forgotten as long as we live. It was a charming night to see two young men making their way to the Army quarters, presenting a beautiful snare drum worth no less than $12. They told us that it was a Christmas box, and they wanted us to turn our prayers.

It was well announced the last few days of the old year that a watch night service would be held at the Army barracks. At the appointed time the Lord having rewarded us with four souls for salvation, and three for sanctification.—CHARLES T. IBBOTSON.

London Division.

MAJOR BAUGH, D. O.

A Friendly Divine.

FOREST.—There are times when we may have to walk in darkness, but now it seems all light for God has been so clearly showing Himself in our midst. On Wednesday morning we in our bed reiling God laid it on my heart to have a banquet, and on returning home I found word from our Major that he was coming for Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, and to try and have a supper. We had but three days to prepare. We held a little council and decided to forward some of the good, a good sum of money, and also two precious souls sought pardon at Jesus' feet. The Rev. Mr. Cascaden (Baptist Church) was with me on the platform and spoke of his great love for the Army.—Captain H. STUBBS.

Impossible to Rest.

MITCHELL.—We are having very spiritual meetings here, and we are believing for souls. Feeling that we must do all we can for our sisters, we held a little tea meeting for the benefit of the poor, and six held up their hands to be prayed for. We are believing for a mighty revival in this place. May God open the windows of heaven and may the blessing come down.—Capt. J. S. MCLEAN.

The Bride and Bridegroom.

PORT DOVER.—Since coming here things have been very dark, and it seems as if our soldiers live in the country and are unable to attend all our meetings. I have had to take my stand alone most of the time. However, I am not alone, for God is with me. Since coming here we have had to bid farewell to our beloved Major and his wife, who have moved to Windsor. We all miss them very much. God has made their lives a blessing to the people of this town.

We were glad to welcome Staff Captain and Mrs. Sharp to the Hamilton Division. They paid us a visit on the 10th, and we had a very powerful meeting, and one soul sought forgiveness. Our Major is greatly visiting among the people a blessing, and it has been the means of leading one soul to God.—Captain S. BUTLEDGE.

Chatham Division.

STAFF-CAPT. MARSHALL, D. O.

(TENANTS WANTED.)

British Columbia Dist.

STAFF-CAPT. BANKS, D.O.

Twenty-Five Prisoners.

VICTORIA.—I hardly know how to begin this report. God has been giving us such blessed times lately. New Year's Eve, just as the old year was going out and the new one coming in, eleven souls came out and found Jesus.

Saturday night being in the holiness meeting, one more came out for salvation, and at night as the invitation was given, one poor backslider reinstated out to the penitent-form, where he was soon followed by six more sin-bound slaves. Praise God for ever!

On Monday night five more came to the Cross. It was beautiful to see one of Sunday night's converts go and bring some of his friends out to the penitent-form and kneel down with them, until they too were soon rejoicing in a newly-found Saviour.

On Wednesday night God gave us one more soul. Last night deep conviction was stamped on many faces, and we are indeed believing to see the results of yesterday's meetings this week.

Altogether God is helping us to gain ground. I heard one of the old soldiers say last night, "That was the best meeting we ever had in the corps." The platform was packed, besides about twenty five who could not get on at all.—Lieut. ANNIE DAVIDSON.

Where's the Point?

VANCOUVER.—On Saturday we had a welcome meeting to our new officers, Captain Lowry and Lieutenante Gooding and Collett. Roming prayer meeting was lively on the march, the comrades turning up in good style and full of the Spirit. The band boys were well to the front and rendered excellent service. God's power was indeed manifest both in the open-air and at the indoor meeting, many souls being deeply convicted, but would not yield.

Sunday's meetings were times of power and blessing. Each one being well attended. Capt. Lowry is introducing herself to the audience, said there wasn't much of her, but what there was it belonged to God. The Lord bless her and her lieutenante! We closed the night meeting with a wave-offering, having cause for rejoicing, the Lord having rewarded us with four souls for salvation, and three for sanctification.—CHARLES T. IBBOTSON.

St. John District.

BRIGADIER JACOBS, D.O.

Garrison Gleanings.

ST. JOHN, N.B.—Praise God for a week of victory. Three backsliders have returned to a loving Father who has freely pardoned all their transgressions; also three more, who were tired of a half-hearted service, made a complete surrender to Jesus, who, according to His promise, accepted the sacrifice and gave them victory.—Cadet C. H.

A Packed Platform.

ST. JOHN III.—Praise God, we are in no wise discouraged, for God is giving us victory. Lately we have seen many saved at the Cross, and believe some are good cases. Our platform is well packed, but we will welcome all who come. At dinner on our hearts to the backsliders coming home.—HELEN ADDISON.

Four Back to the Fold.

WOODSTOCK, N. B.—The most interesting reports to me are those that tell of souls getting saved, and, thank God, we are able to report souls in Woodstock. God is speaking very loudly to the people, and a number have heeded the call. On Sunday last four wanderers came back to the Saviour's fold. Two more have sought pardon since then, and six held up their hands to be prayed for. We are believing for a mighty revival in this place. May God open the windows of heaven and may the blessing come down.—Capt. J. S. MCLEAN.

Kingston Division.

STAFF-CAPT. BOLTON, D.O.

A Happy Trio.

COBOURG.—God is helping us in a wonderful manner. On Monday two souls turned from sin and sought salvation, and on Saturday night another sin-sick soul came found peace. All seem to be uniting on very nicely.—Capt. BAIRD.

A Wooden Bee.

ORILLIA.—On Thursday we had a wood-bee. Two friends had given us some lumber and the Captain got the men to come and cut it up. On Saturday night we had one of the Methodist ministers with us, who very earnestly expressed his love for and sympathy with our work. Sunday was a day of power and blessing, and one soul forgiveness. God is working nicely since our new officers took charge. Nine souls have sought salvation.—Sergt. M. WILSON.

Ottawa Division.

MAJOR CALHOUN, D. O.

More to Follow.

ALMONTE.—Since coming here, (my first station as captain) God has wonderfully helped me and blessed us richly. Six souls have knelt at the mercy-seat for salvation, and three for sanctification. One soul has sought and found the forgiveness of Jesus Christ, and we are believing for more to follow.—Capt. J. D. HAMMON.

Montreal Division.

STAFF-CAPT. BENNETT, D. O.

He Changed His Mind.

LACHUTE.—"How did you like the meeting last night, J——?"

"Well, I never cared very much for the Salvation Army, but last night's meeting was splendid."

Such was part of a conversation between a young man who had been at our meeting last Sunday evening and another person. The fact of the matter is he came to Jesus in that meeting and had his sins forgiven. Do you wonder at the change in his opinion?

Last Thursday evening some person with more mischief than common sense in his composition, set cayenne pepper on the stove, and thus hindered us from having our meeting. We trust he will seek God's forgiveness before it is too late.—Capt. A. E. FRY.

Open-Air Prohibited.

MONTREAL I.—Last Monday we started an open-air meeting, but before we were able to talk much to the people who had gathered around us, one of the city authorities came up and said we must move on. We went back to the barracks, where two door scouts were set free. One man who misunderstood the Captain and thought he wanted to put the meeting before the regular time said, "I thought you were going to save souls!" He afterwards was heard crying for mercy, and our blessed Saviour delivered him from his sins. Another young man's heart here lately.—Special Correspondent I. M. WILCOX.

A Female March.

WINCHESTER.—Captain Walker had farewelled, and our new officers had not arrived. Meeting time came round, but not a single brother puts in an appearance, so the sisters with big drum and snare drum set out alone. A good march and a splendid meeting was the result.—L. EMPEY.

Halifax District.

ADJT. JEWER, D. O.

Music and Sweets.

LUNENBURG, N.S.—On Tuesday, Jan. 11th we had a banquet, followed by a grand musical meeting. Although it was a very rainy evening the people turned out well, and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. Capt. Rayner was relieved by Capts. Knight and Davis and Lieuts. Whiteman and Frizzel. The musical part of the programme went off splendidly.—F. H.

Twenty-Five Captured.

HALIFAX.—Our God and souls we fight, and praise the Lord, we fight victoriously. In the last fortnight twenty-five precious souls have sought pardon, some dear little children among the number. Our Junior work is flourishing. May both old and young be gathered into the fold.—Sergt. CASSIN.

KALEIDOSCOPE vs. THE HYDRA.

A Turn of Things.

K——is fighting with the seven-headed hydra, and it makes him wish that he was a hercules. I assure you it is a herculean job to slay the monster.

The Greek mythology tells us that when Hercules lost off one head of the serpent that immediately two new heads grew in its place until he took a fire-brand in his left hand and burned each stump as the head fell. I am hoping for the fire brands. Who can suggest one?

The warrior has the head "false excuse" under his heel. Oh, that it was cut off forever! The head he is now striking for is "Decreases." The comrades help him with your faith to give it the death blow.

As for the heads, dearest reader, let your wildest imagination suggest an interpretation to your consciences.

And now here are a few figures for last week's issue:

| St. Catharines | 10 | M. Ayre | 10 |
| Campbellton, N.B. | (for one week only) | | 50 |
| | Total increase | | 172 |

The following are decreases fitly inscribed on a tombstone:

R. I. P.

| | |
|---|---|
| North Sydney | 25 |
| Halifax III. | 10 |
| Orillia | 10 |
| Goderich | 10 |
| Tilbury Centre | 10 |
| Total decrease | 75 |

Down in the cold, damp grave!
It is there they have laid you now, poor dear
For Your WAR CRYS have gone astray
And the Editor does frown,
Say, will you rise again, my brother?

It is tragic poetry that casts a gloom of sorrow over the decreases. We, however, in the line suggests the possibility of a resurrection; may it be a glorious one!

Deducting the decreases from the increases it leaves a balance of 97 copies to the favor of the Increases. That looks more encouraging than last week.

Death and devils often go together.

Capt. David Moore is the noble leader of the Decreases with 50. This is sad enough, but just as it should be. Go on David, you'll fall the old crow of a Goliath yet.

Close after follow five corps, each with an increase of ten copies. This is really a serious reflection on our large corps, as all five of them are selling a fair and higher average in comparison with the other. There is another feature in the case of our women officers. Because everyone of those Captains is a lassie. God bless you. I always thought there was something good in women.

I am also giving due recognition to the following two "Gentleman Soldiers," each of them ordered ten copies of five copies. God bless the men; some of them know how to sell Cries.

Capt. Ayre, of St. Kitts, increased twelve copies this week, but I must in justice mention that he had dropped twenty copies last week, so that makes him still eight copies behind. Keep on, Mark, you will gain the mark again and your brave wife will help you to overpass it.

Campbellton's supply has been raised fifty copies in anticipation of a double sale on account of its Corps History being in that Cry. Corps History is a thing of great interest locally, therefore look for your own corps.

A cold east wind from the lungs of Adjutant Jewer brings two decreases. North Sydney twenty-five and Halifax III., ten. I am surprised at this bad example, especially from Halifax, a city noted for warm-hearted comrades, and rise again as quick as possible. These two pills are hard to swallow.

Coldwater has a surplus of twenty-eight copies, which I think is only temporary; anyhow, we hope so. Orillia drops another ten this week, that makeing twenty in two weeks. I know they have been burned out, which makes things a little difficult, but look out, the Captain will Scare the devil yet.

Tilbury Centre has to drop as so Captain is there, and Secretary McDonald decreases ten Cars and twenty Y. S. as he cannot manage the lot. God bless you, Secretary. When the Captain comes you will have time to immediate increase, won't you?

There is a paper, the existence of which is sadly lessened by Decreases, and yet it is a splendid paper. Its name is The Young Soldier. I am speaking of the New Westminster had to drop a hundred. Don't you try it.

I suggest that Mrs. Cooper, of Stratford, challenge Capt. Clarke, of Hamilton I., which corps is going to increase first during the next month. Both corps take only 100 WAR CRYS; but I believe that Stratford will take Hamilton very badly. What do you think Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Clarke? Let us know.

Next week there will appear in this space something else, so good-bye for to-day. Yours,

KALEIDOSCOPE.

SALVATION SONGS.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

1 We are out on the ocean sailing,
Homward bound we merrily glide,
We are out on the ocean sailing,
To our home beyond the tide,

CHORUS.

All the storms will soon be over,
Then we'll anchor in the harbor;
We are out on the ocean sailing,
To our home beyond the tide.

Millions now are safely landed
Over on the golden shore;
Millions more are on their journey,
Yet there's room for millions more.

Come on board, and ship for glory;
Is! haste, make up your mind,
For our vessel's weighing anchor,
You will soon be left behind.

You have kindred over yonder
On that bright and happy shore;
By-and-bye we'll await the number,
When the tolls of life are o'er.

Spread your sails while heavenly breezes
Swiftly waft our vessels on;
All on board are loudly singing;
Free salvation is the song.

I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?

FACT vs. ARGUMENT.

2 Jesus, my King, high over all,
In heaven, or earth, or hell
Angels and man before Thee fall,
And devils fear and fly.

CHORUS.

We have no other argument,
We want no other plea,
It is enough that Jesus died,
And that He died for me.

Jesus, the name to sinners dear,
The name to sinners given;
He scatters all their gloom and fear,
He turns their hell to heaven.

Jesus the prisoner's fetters breaks,
And bruises Satan's head;
Power into strengthless souls He speaks,
And life into the dead.

O that the world might taste and see
The riches of His grace;
The arms of love that compass me,
Would all mankind embrace.

Happy, if with my latest breath
I may but gasp His name,
Preach Him to all, and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb!

For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

LAMB OF CALVARY.

3 In evil long I took delight,
Unaware Thy name to fear,
Till a new object met my sight,
And stopped my wild career.

CHORUS.

Oh, the Lamb, the bleeding Lamb,
The Lamb upon Calvary, the Lamb that was slain,
That liveth again, to intercede for me.

I saw one hanging on a tree
In agonies and blood,
Who fixed His languid eyes on me,
As near the cross I stood.

Sure never till my latest breath
Can I forget that look;
It seemed to charge me with His death,
Though not a word He spoke.

My conscience felt and owned my guilt,
And plunged me in despair
I saw my sins His blood had spilt,
And helped to nail Him there.

A second look He gave, which said,
"I freely all forgive;
This blood is for thy ransom paid,
I die that thou may'st live."

When He saw the multitude, He was moved with compassion on them.

MARCH ON.

4 Shout aloud, Salvation boys, we'll have an uproar;
Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along,
Sing it as our comrades sang it many a million strong,
As they were marching to glory.

CHORUS.

March on, march on! we'll bring the jubilee;
Fight on, fight on! salvation makes us free;
We'll shout our Saviour's praises over every land and sea,
As we go marching to glory.

How the anxious shout it, when they hear the joyful sound!
How the weakest conquer, when the Saviour they have found!
How our grand battalion seems to spring out of the ground,
As we go marching to glory.

Yes, and there are Christian men that weep with joyful tears
When our Saviour's honored, as He has not been for years,
And a full salvation drives away their doubts and fears
As we go marching to glory.

"Oh, they're hopeless soldiers," our enemies made boast,
They forgot that with us comes the Almighty Holy Ghost,
And unseen battalions of the glorious heavenly host,
As we go marching to glory.

So we'll make a thoroughfare for Jesus and His train,
All the world shall hear us as fresh converts we gain;
Sin shall fly before us, for resistance is in vain
As we go marching to glory.

Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

COMING TO THEE.

5 I come to do Thy will,
I come that self may fall;
I come for Thee to stay and kill,
I come to give up all.

CHORUS.

Coming to Thee,
Coming to Thee, my Lord;
I'm coming, Lord, to do Thy will,
I'm coming now to Thee.

I come to give up ease,
I come to bear the cross,
I come to do what Will Thou please,
I come to suffer loss.

I come my all to give,
I come self to deny,
I come Thy lovely life to live,
I come that sin may die.

I come for cleansing blood,
I come for purging fire,
I come to let Thee make me good,
I come to feel Thee nigher.

I come to be kept right,
I come the least to be,
I come to serve Thee day and night,
I come to fight for Thee.

WHO'LL FIGHT?

6 Who'll fight for the Lord everywhere
Who'll wave the banner of light,
Where the Lamb leads His hosts free from sin,
All robed in their garments of white?

Everywhere, who'll fight for the Lord everywhere?

Oh, think of the fiends everywhere,
Who on man's soul secure have trod,
Of the curses that breathe in the air,
From souls wandering far from God.

Oh, Saviour, lead me everywhere,
Till souls in the world around Thy rest,
Till the prey from the mighty we tear,
And our country with Thy peace is blest.

I'll fight for the Lord everywhere,
For the terrible need I can see,
Many dying in sin everywhere,
My J esus alone can set free.

If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee.

I LIVE BUT TO THEE.

7 At last this vain world shall all go,
Its charms I now see are but dross,
For none but my Saviour I'll know,
I'll glory alone in the cross:
I am Thine, blessed Jesus, all Thine,
The witness impart unto me,
The death that I die is to sin,
The life that I live is to Thee.

Go, fetch your fine jewels from Him;
Go, joys, that won't share with His love;
Go, hopes, that would draw me to sin;
Go, all that from Him would remove.
Come, sorrow, if only in Thee
I shall cling to my Saviour and God;
From doubting and fear, O set free,
To rejoice evermore in my Lord.

I have loved ones before the White Throne,
Shouting sweetest gladness and praise,
Their raptures I'd join as my own,
Resident in heavenly grace;
I'll on all the way dream, I'll dream,
And fell of that two-edged name,
I'd be in a desert that boast
From the presence of God and the Lamb.

EYES FRONT!

DID YOU HEAR

That you can buy cabinet photos of the late Mrs. General Booth at the Salvation Army Stores for 15c. each? If you have none in your home, secure one right away.

DO YOU KNOW THE DOCTRINES OF THE S. A.?

If not, it is for you to find out by getting a copy of the Doctrines from the Trade Department. Price, 15c.; red cloth cover.

In Answer to All Enquiries

Re "Fair Canada's Dark Side." I wish to say that we have a few copies left in stock, price 10c. each. [This pamphlet contains accurate statistics, and facts and incidents, connected with the Canadian Rescue Work, and has had a large sale in Canada.]

SOME OF THE BEST

and most substantial reading can be found in Wesley's Lectures. These books should be possessed by every Christian Worker, S. A. Officer, Candidate, and Soldier,—in short, should be read by all those who are anxious to win souls. We are selling a set of Lectures comprising:—

"Lectures to Professing Christians;"
"Lectures on Revivals;"
"Skeletons of Theological Lectures."

The value of the books if bought singly is $1.65, but they can be had at the greatly reduced price of $1.40 per set, post paid to any address in Canada.

FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY

We will be able to supply a $5.00 suit of Pants for $4 50, and a $10.00 Tunic for $9 00. These reductions are made possible by a piece of cloth which we purchased at a reduced price, and which we desire to cut up right away. This offer is only good as long as the stock lasts. Samples and self-measurement forms supplied free on application.

YOU HAVE BEENTHYING

To go through this winter with your old overcoat, but find out it is a failure, and now you have to get a new one after all. If you are sensible you will send at once for self-measurement forms and samples, left in the Trade Department. You might bear in mind that there is a good deal of cloth in your old overcoat at $17.00, being a special reduction of $2.00 on a remnant of good cloth in stock. If you can afford it, take this chance.

LADIES!

Will you please read the advertisement re Cremonia? After you have read it we will tell you that you can have an Ulster from the same cloth at a reduced price of $14 50, or from another remnant at $13 50, and if you drop us a post card we will send you samples of these two jobs and self-measurement forms.

BOUND "ALL THE WORLD" FOR ONE THOUSAND, EIGHT HUNDRED AND NINETY-TWO!

Comprising twelve months, in tasteful cover, a handsome, well bound volume, only $1.75.

The same volume for 1891 at $1.75. The bound volumes for 1889 and 1890, $1.25 each, these two years being smaller volumes.
